HALIFAX, Friday, Dec. 18.

The Royal Mail steamship Canada, Capt. Lang, from Liverpool at 11 o'clock on the morning of the 5th inst., passed this harbor at 8 o'clock this (Friday) morning, but could not get up to her dock until after 10 o'clock, and sailed for Boston at half-past 3 o'clock A. M.

The advices brought by the Canada are one week later than those received by the Asia at New-York. The trade review takes the following report: "Dec. 14, lat. 49° long. 30°, passed American ship Quickstep, bound East. Dec. 17, lat. 44°, passed brig Jessie, Minots, bound West.

The Canada, from Boston, arrived out on Sunday, the 29th ultimo.

The Collins steamship Adriatic, from New-York on the afternoon of Monday, the 23d ult., arrived off Point Lynas at 6 o'clock on the evening of the 3d, but owing to the lowness of the tides did not come into the Mersey until the afternoon of the 4th.

The North Star left Southampton for New-York on Wednesday, the 2d inst.

The following were the main features of her news: The failures of HERMAN COZ & Co., of London and Liverpool, in the cotton trade, with liabilities of £[illegible]; RAMSOTT, BAWN & Co., of London, in the India trade, with liabilities of £[illegible]; M. JOSS, of Dundee, liabilities £300,000; HIRSCH, MOSES & Co., of Stettin, liabilities 1,200,000 thalers; H. HOFFMAN & Co., of London, largely engaged in the Swiss trade; F. MAGNE, ship-owner, trading as MAGNE & CONCOMAS, Liverpool; and others of less amounts were announced.

The crisis was still more severe at Hamburg, where the failures were too numerous to particularize.

An order had been promulgated at Berlin, enacting a suspension of the usury laws.

The launching of the Leviathan was slowly progressing. The vessel had been gradually moved between forty and fifty feet towards the water.

The Queen of Spain had been delivered of a prince.

There is little else of interest per North Star that is not anticipated by the Canada.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Parliament was opened on the 3d inst., by the Queen in person. The Queen's speech was as follows:

"MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN—Circumstances have recently arisen connected with the commercial interests which have induced me to call Parliament together before the usual time. The failure of joint-stock banks and of some mercantile firms, have produced such an extent of distrust as led me to authorize the Ministers to recommend to the Directors of the Bank of England the adoption of a course of proceeding which appeared necessary for allaying the prevalent alarm. As that course has involved a departure from the existing law, a bill for indemnifying those who advised it will be submitted for your consideration. I have observed with great regret that the state of commercial transactions in general has occasioned a limitation of employment in manufacturing districts, which I fear cannot fail to be attended with much local distress. I trust, however, that this evil may not be of long duration, and the abundant harvest with which it has graciously pleased Divine Providence to bless this land, will, I hope, in some degree mitigate the sufferings which this state of things must unavoidably produce.

"While many of my subjects in India have been exposed, and while I grieve for the excessive bereavements and sorrow which it has caused, I have derived the greatest satisfaction from the distinguished success which have attended the heroic exertions of the comparatively small force which have been opposed to greatly superior numbers, without the aid of the reinforcements dispatched from this country to their assistance. The arrival of those reinforcements will, I trust, speedily complete the suppression of this widely-spread revolt."

After still further eulogizing the gallantry of the troops, the speech continues:

"It is satisfactory to know that the general mass of the population in India have taken no part in the rebellion, while the most considerable of the native princes have acted in the most friendly manner, and have rendered important services. I have given directions that the papers relating to these matters shall be laid before you. The affairs of my East India dominion will require your serious consideration, and I recommend them to your earnest attention. The nations of Europe are in the enjoyment of the blessings of peace, which nothing seems likely to disturb. The stipulations of the treaty which I concluded with the Shah of Persia have been faithfully carried into execution, and the Persian forces have evacuated the Territory of Herat. Your attention will be called to the laws which regulate the representation of the people in Parliament, with a view to consider what amendments may be safely and beneficially made therein.

"The remainder of the speech is merely of local interest.

In the House of Lords, Baron MACAULAY took his seat as a Peer.

Lord FITZHARDINGE moved and Lord CAREW seconded the address in response to the Queen's speech, and, after considerable debate, in which Lord DERBY complained of the unsatisfactory nature of the speech, and deplored the condition of the country, the address was agreed to.

In the House of Commons, Lord JOHN RUSSELL gave notice that on the 10th, he should move for a Committee of the Whole House to consider the oath of abjuration and the civil disabilities of Jews.

Mr. HENLEY gave notice that he should move a resolution complementary of the principles of unlimited liability in the case of joint stock banks.

The address was agreed to, after some debate, in which Mr. D'ISRAELI censured generally the action of the Government.

Lord PALMERSTON stated that he did not intend to bring in any bill on India till after the recess, and announced his intention of asking the House to make provision for General HAVELOCK, as the East India Company would do the same for General WILSON.

In the House of Lords, on Friday, Lord ELLENBOROUGH gave notice that he would move for a copy of the Indian Army act, and information in regard to [illegible] the press.

In the House of Commons Lord PALMERSTON stated that the loans asked by Austria for the use of her projected line in Italy, pending to India, were such as the Government could not accept, and that the negotiations [illegible] fell through.

It was said that the Turkish Government were [illegible] a line from Constantinople to the head of the Persian Gulf.

Mr. MAGUIRE called attention to the imprisonment of two British [illegible] at Naples, and asked what Government had done in the matter.

Lord PALMERSTON replied that the British Consul had been admitted to the prisoners, and found their only complaint was want of books. There was no cause of complaint against the Neapolitan Government.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer moved for a Committee of the Whole House to consider the Bank act, and asked leave to bring in a bill to indemnify the Bank for the recent over-issue. He explained the necessity for the action the Ministers took, and suggested that it might be advisable amongst other reforms to make bank notes a legal tender throughout the Kingdom.

After some opposition from Messrs. GLADSTONE and DISRAELI, the motion was agreed to, and the bill read the first time.

The Adriatic steamship had been secured still further down the Mersey ways, but the ship had still [illegible] before she would be afloat. Her progress was very tedious, but her engineers had perfect control of her, and hopes were entertained for a successful result in a short time. A scaffolding from which to view the launch broke down and a number of persons were more or less injured. On Monday the vessel had nearly five feet of water under her.

In the Bankruptcy Court it has been decided that the great Northern Railroad Company had no claim on REDPATH's estate.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

In London on Dec. 2 money continued in active demand. The Stock market was firm, caused by the arrival of the West India mail steamer with £300,000 in silver. The suspensions of the day were MESSRS. BAGSHAW & Co., in the London and West India trade, with liabilities amounting to £200,000 sterling, and KEMP & Co., in the German trade, with liabilities amounting to £50,000.

The semi-monthly shipment of Silver to India and China was £[illegible].

At a meeting of Erie Railroad bondholders it was received that the Committee should be requested to receive subscriptions to the proposed new loan, and to communicate with the Directors in New-York, with a view to an arrangement for general protection.

On Thursday, the 3d instant, the funds were quiet while money was in active demand in the preparation for the payments of the 4th. The failures were Messrs. HODGSON & FURNISS, of London, wholesale Stationers; MESSRS. BARNES, ROSENBERGER & Co. and HERSCH, BROTHER & Co., both in the German trade, in London; C. C. FIX, a large Corn merchant of Belfast, and FRIEDRICHSON CURRIE & CO., Corn Dealers, at Hartlepool. Their liabilities are not stated. Another large London house is reported to have sought assistance from the Bank.

Heavy exports of silver were making to Hamburg.

On Friday, the 4th inst., the funds fluctuated slightly, but closed firmly. There was no change in Money, but great caution was observable.

A dispatch from Italy announces the failure of the house of CELLARD, at Genoa, Milan and Turin.

THE VERY LATEST.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO LIVERPOOL.]

PARIS, FRIDAY EVENING.—The journal La Presse has been suspended for two months, in consequence of the article which appeared in it yesterday, signed by M. PAYNES, on the refusal of Messrs. CARNOT and COUCHAUX to take the oath prescribed to members of the Corps Legislatif.

HAMBURG, Friday.—THE PANIC.—The Senate has just convened another extraordinary convention of burghers-chief for to-morrow, to empower the former to establish a government discount institution, with thirty millions marks bancos capital.

LONDON, Friday Evening.—The Times' City Article says: "The demand at the Bank and in the discount market continues active, but payments maturing to-day have been provided for in a much more satisfactory manner than had been anticipated. The funds opened steadily this morning at an advance of ¼. There was, subsequently, some heaviness, but a decided recovery took place before the termination of business. A good effect was produced by the arrival of the Adriatic with £80,000 in specie, and satisfactory commercial intelligence from New-York. The amount of gold taken to the Bank to-day was £90,000."

The Daily News city article, says: "The funds improved ¼ to-day, at the Bank of England. To-day the demand for money was to a fair extent, but not pressing. In exceptional cases, first-class bills are discounted to somewhat below the Bank rate."

The suspension has been announced of F. & R. BOVET, an old firm in the China trade, with moderate liabilities. Their difficulties are understood to have been principally caused by the late heavy fall in the silk market. The stoppage has also taken place of C. A. JONAS & Co., general merchants, who have been brought down by the recent failures in the north of Europe. Liabilities supposed to be about £100,000. Several failures are announced at Amsterdam and Rotterdam. They are respectable second-rate houses.

In Foreign Exchanges, yesterday afternoon, rates were in many instances almost nominal, from the absence of business.

Private advices from Paris describe a calm and satisfactory state of the Money market, and no mention that there is even an expectation of a further reduction in the rate of discount.

It is estimated that about 15 per cent. of the Wool brought forward at the late London sales was withdrawn, and bought in the produce markets during the past week. The Times City article says: "The improvement at the commencement of the week has not been maintained. There seems, however, to be less anxiety on the part of holders to realize at the present low quotations."

The tea market is so depressed as to make it almost impossible to effect sales.

The launch of the Leviathan is expected to be completed on Tuesday or Wednesday next.

Great depression continued to be experienced in Hamburg and Alton. Dispatches say that the failures were too numerous to specify the names. In one day twenty important houses failed and business was suspended. It was believed that other houses would go. The aggregate liabilities of the fallen and doomed concerns were reported to be twenty-seven millions marks banco. The fifteen millions provided for advances on merchandise proved a mere drop in a bucket, and a rumor was in circulation that advances to the extent of 400,000,000 had been asked for. A general meeting of the burghers of Hamburg had been convoked to devise means to allay the panic. Bills could not be negotiated and business was at a stand. A law extending a respite of one month to all bills payable at maturity, was to be introduced in the Senate.

ULLERS & KRAMER, whose temporary suspension was recently reported, had fully stopped. Liabilities, 12,000,000 marks banco.

No fresh failures occurred on the 3d.

FRANCE.

The news is unimportant.

M. HAGON, the Republican Deputy from Lyons, took the oath in the Corps Legislatif, and Messrs. CARNOT and COUCHAUX were the only members who refused to take it, and their seats had been declared vacant. It is said there is to be a new enactment, enforcing the oath to the Emperor as a preliminary to becoming a candidate at the elections.

SPAIN.

The Spanish Court refuses to accede to the demand of Mexico, that its envoy shall be received, as a necessary preliminary to the negotiation.

The accounts from Cuba received at Madrid state that the squadron assembled there was ready to sail at a moment's notice, to act against Mexico or elsewhere. Soldiers seasoned to the climate had alone been selected for the service. The Artillery had been largely increased, and 1,000 marines were on board the squadron.

PRUSSIA.

The Usury laws were suspended for a period of three months, and the Bank of Prussia was making advances on stocks and shares at the rate of 6 per cent.

There was very little panic at Berlin.

AUSTRIA.

The accounts from Vienna continue gloomy.

It was reported that several large manufacturers intended to close their establishments and discharge their workmen in a few days.

SWEDEN.

There had been numerous additional failures at Stockholm, and the commercial crisis there created great anxiety at Copenhagen.

The Government had lent 3,000,000 francs to the Directors of the Bank, to sustain its credit.

A dispatch from Stockholm, dated the 3d, says: "The crisis is becoming alarming."

RUSSIA.

Heavy frosts had taken place, and the river was quite frozen up at Archangel.

GREECE.

The Ministerial crisis was over. Two members of the Cabinet had retired.

Commercial Intelligence.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

The Brokers' Circular states the sales of the week at 66,500 bales, of which 10,500 were on speculation, and 4,500 for export. The market opened at an advance of ⅛d.@⅛d., but subsequently the advance was almost all lost, except on middling descriptions, which were steady, owing to their scarcity. The sales of Friday were 2,000 bales, the market closing with a declining tendency at the following quotations: Orleans Fair 6¼d.; Orleans Middling, [illegible]; Mobile Fair, 6⅛d.; Mobile Middling, 6⅛d.; Uplands Fair, 6¼d.; Uplands Middling, 6⅛d. The stock in port was estimated at 317,000 bales, of which 181,000 bales were American.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE dull at 32s.@33s.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

Messrs. BARING BROS. quote BAR SILVER 5s. 1½d.; EAGLES, 76s. 2½d. CONSOLS were quoted at the close on Friday at 91⅞@91½ for money and account.

There was no change to note in the Money market; the demand continued active.

The Bullion in the Bank had increased £94,000.

LONDON MARKETS.

Messrs. BARING BROS. quote IRON dull at £5 10s. for rails and £6 for bars. PIG IRON steady at 52s. 6d. WHEAT advanced 1s.@2s., but closed with little inquiry at weak prices; White American 46s.@52s. and Red 44s.@46s. FLOUR 25s.@28s. SUGAR advanced 6d.@1s., closing heavy. COFFEE steady. TEA—Little inquiry and prices weak. Congou 11½d. LINSEED CAKES advanced 5s.@10s. FISH OILS—Quotations nominal. Linseed dull at 29s. 6d. RICE quiet. English TIN advanced 6d. SPIRITS TURPENTINE—Sales at 34s.

HAVRE MARKETS.

The sales of COTTON for the week ending the 2d inst., inclusive, were 4,000 bales at firm prices—New-Orleans tres ordinaire 102 francs. BREADSTUFFS quiet. ASHES heavy. OILS—Sales unimportant and quotations nominal. PROVISIONS dull. RICE quiet. SUGAR firm, and all qualities slightly advanced. WHALEBONE—Little inquiry and prices weak.

LATEST MARKETS.

LIVERPOOL, Saturday, Dec. 5—11 A. M.

Messrs. RICHARDSON, SPENCE & Co. say BREADSTUFFS are dull, with so far little or no business this morning in any article.

PROVISIONS are unchanged. The TALLOW market closed with a firm feeling at London yesterday, and quotations are advanced 1s.

The COTTON market opens quiet, and it is yet too early to estimate the business of the day.

Extraordinary Developments.

SUPPOSED MURDER—MISTAKEN IDENTITY—PERJURY OF A WITNESS—MYSTERIOUS REAPPEARANCE OF THE SUPPOSED MURDERED PERSON.

NEW-HAVEN, Friday, Dec. 18.

IT will be remembered that last Winter a boy named CHAS. E. SAGE, about 19 years of age, was missing from his home in Cromwell, near Middleton, in this State, and that an Irishman named PATRICK NUGENT was arrested on a charge of murdering the lad and putting the body under the ice in the Connecticut river. In a few months afterwards a body was found in the river without a head. This body was believed to be that of the missing boy, from several marks upon it, as well as from a portion of the clothing. Soon afterwards the lining of an overcoat was found answering to the description of that worn by the missing person.

Some months elapsed, when a sailor, named BENSON, came to Cromwell, and directly charged NUGENT, the Irishman, with the murder. He said he saw the deed done, and assisted NUGENT in putting the corpse under a hay-mow. He described accurately the lad's appearance—his dress, the color of his hair, &c.—and declared that he had not had any peace of mind since the murder, and that he had come to Cromwell expressly to divulge all he knew about it. He confronted NUGENT, and charged the deed upon him. The accused denied it, but trembled from head to foot. A Grand Jury found a true bill against NUGENT, whose time of trial was fixed for the present month.

Thus matters have rested until recently, when the cousin of the missing boy, living in Ithaca, N. Y., received an anonymous letter from the interior of Pennsylvania, which he showed to his father, a Mr. WILLIAMS. The letter was answered, when another letter was received from Pennsylvania, signed WM. RUSSELL, which Mr. WILLIAMS himself answered. He at the same time addressed the Postmaster requesting him to watch for the person who called for the letter, and describe him. The Postmaster did so, when Mr. WILLIAMS immediately left Ithaca for Pennsylvania, found RUSSELL, whom he discovered to be his cousin, Charles E. Sage, the identical missing boy!

A special Court is held at Haddam to-day, when NUGENT will be liberated.

The case is involved in the deepest mystery beyond what has been related. No one can assign any reason for the perjury of the sailor, who swore that he saw the murder committed, and there is no information to lead to the identity of the body that was found, and buried as that of the boy SAGE. The annals of crime do not afford a more extraordinary case than this.

NEW-HAVEN, Friday, Dec. 18—P. M.

JOHN A. BENSON, the sailor who certified that he saw the murder of CHARLES E. SAGE, of Cromwell, has been arrested on a charge of perjury, with intent to take life, and has acknowledged his guilt. The crime will send him to the State Prison for life. There are no further developments.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Provisions of Senator Douglas' Kansas Bill—Debate in Both Houses on the Propriety of Issue Treasury Notes.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 18.

The bill introduced into the Senate to-day by Mr. DOUGLAS provides for a Board of five persons, to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, to make an enumeration of the inhabitants of Kansas, and a fair apportionment of members to the Convention; also provides for an election to be held on a day designated by the Board, not less than ninety nor more than one hundred and twenty days from the passage of this act; also provides that the Board shall be intrusted with the appointment of Judges and places of voting, which is to be confined to every free white male citizen of the United States over twenty years who may be a bona fide inhabitant of the Territory on the 1st of December, and who shall have resided three months prior to the said election in the county in which he offers to vote; also, provides that the Convention shall assemble at not less than thirty nor more than sixty days after the election of Delegates; also, provides that the Constitution shall be submitted to the legal voters for their free acceptance or rejection, and, unless adopted by the majority, all the legal votes cast shall be null and void. The bill secures the personal and political rights of the people, including those of speech and the press.

XXXVth CONGRESS.....First Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 18.

Mr. DOUGLAS introduced a bill to authorize the people of Kansas to form a Constitution and State Government, preparatory to their admission into the Union on an equal footing with the original States.

The resolutions submitted yesterday by Mr. PUGH and Mr. TRUMBULL, calling upon the President for further information in reference to Kansas affairs, were agreed to.

The Senate then resumed the consideration of the Treasury Note bill.

Mr. HUNTER, while explaining the provisions of the bill, said, although the crisis in commercial circles was perhaps past, yet there would not be a general revival of trade before the last of April or the first of May. Before that time the money now proposed to be raised would be needed by the Treasury Department.

Mr. SEWARD thought it clear there was a necessity for the issue of notes, but the bill was not sufficiently guarded in several particulars. It had no limitation as to the time during which these notes might be issued. He was of the opinion that the revenues to be collected during the present year would meet all deficiencies, and there would be another session of Congress next year, when any further action might be taken which seemed necessary. He therefore proposed to limit the bill to the beginning of the next session. He thought ten millions would be sufficient, and the rate of interest contemplated seemed too high. Four per centum would procure all the money of which the Government might stand in need.

Mr. HUNTER had no objection to limiting the time. A large surplus was needed to carry on the operations of the Government. Senators have the experience of the Secretary of the Treasury to justify them in supposing that it will be safe to issue this amount, or so much thereof as he might find necessary. The surplus in the Treasury had been rapidly diminishing ever since the suspension of specie payment by the banks.

[The proceedings were here interrupted by a message from the House, announcing the death of Mr. MONTGOMERY, of Pennsylvania, whom Mr. BIGLER pronounced a eulogy upon the character of the deceased.]

Mr. HUNTER resumed—As to the rate of interest he had no idea the notes would be issued at six per cent., but it was better to pay that rate as the maximum. He presumed the Secretary would try the market at three per cent.

Mr. SIMMONS vindicated the Banks from the charge in the President's Message that they were the cause of the present commercial revulsion. He thought they ought not to be called irresponsible institutions. The evils were the effect of speculation. Productive labor was the only sure basis of wealth. The change of duties at the last session, which was made in order to deplete the Treasury, had encouraged speculation. He advocated a protective tariff, as the means of preventing England from obtaining that commercial ascendancy to which she had been directing all her efforts ever since she found she could not conquer us by arms. He only wanted ten millions, and would vote for a bill with that reduction.

Mr. HUNTER could not consent to such a reduction. If only ten millions were authorized he thought they would be called upon for another bill in January. He was willing to reduce the maximum rate of interest to 4½ per cent. and limit the operation of the bill to one year.

Mr. CRITTENDEN preferred to have no interest on the notes, but to let them circulate as bank notes. It was rather strange after the crisis was past, and the banks were everywhere resuming, that the Government should suspend, and Congress must supply the means. It was only from the imperative necessity of the measure that he could consent to vote for the bill. He hoped this would be followed up by a measure to increase the revenue to an extent sufficient to meet all contingencies.

Mr. BELL alluded to the fact that many honest importers were driven from trade in consequence of frauds committed under the Tariff bill of the last session. He thought a revision of that system indispensable. He could not vote for the issue of twenty millions, but moved for so much as is now necessary.

Without concluding the subject the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 18.

Mr. CLINGMAN offered a resolution directing the Committee on Accounts to examine the stationery provided for the use of members, report its real value, and make such recommendation as they may deem proper in the premises. Mr. CLINGMAN said if the prices now paid for stationery are the same as heretofore, there must be a great mistake somewhere. He had found it so inferior as to be obliged to buy some at book stores. He had seen a statement in the Globe of such a serious character, and which, if true, implicated the late Clerk, Mr. CULLOM, in an embezzlement of public money. If any officer of the House was in combination with outsiders to buy stationery at low and sell at high rates, he ought to be punished. It may be that great injustice has been done that Clerk, of whose conduct he knew nothing. The affair and charges, however, require investigation.

Mr. HOUSTON thought that a Special Committee should be appointed to examine this subject, and nothing else. There ought to be a law requiring a strict examination of the accounts of every outgoing Clerk of the House. He was surprised that Mr. CULLOM's friends had allowed so much time of the session to elapse without demanding an investigation.

Mr. SAVAGE remarked that the charges against Mr. CULLOM were made a matter of discussion in his District during the last canvass, and he had been told that Mr. CULLOM made $40,000 outside of his pay, as Clerk. This came from Mr. STANTON, a member of the Tennessee Legislature, and who was once the pet of Mr. CULLOM.

Mr. MASON said the Committee on Accounts had found no improper conduct yet, and he hoped they would not. He suggested other examinations.

Mr. MAYNARD said he was not here to screen Mr. CULLOM's conduct from a full investigation, and he was requested by him to ask an inquiry. He demanded it.

After further debate, a resolution was adopted referring to a Select Committee of five the accounts of the late Clerk, with power to report at any time, and to send for persons and papers.

Mr. J. GLANCY JONES, from the Committee, reported a bill authorizing the issue of Treasury Notes; a bill making appropriations for the expenses of the Indian Department, and the Civil and Diplomatic Appropriation bill.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, on the Treasury bill, which is similar to that introduced in the Senate.

Mr. J. GLANCY JONES said the exigencies of the Government required the bill to be passed as rapidly as possible, but he would not press its consideration now, unless the House, with some degree of unanimity, would give its consent. He was unwilling to force a debate, as the bill was not yet printed.

Mr. CARWELL said the House should have full time for a measure of such moment.

Mr. BANKS remarked if they considered the time at which Secretary Treasury notes were issued, and the condition in which the Government was placed, there would be found to be no precedent for the passage of a bill like this. There is no such exigency now as to require the passage of this bill at once.

Mr. BOCOCK alluded to the fact that six or eight weeks ago the late Treasury paid sixteen dollars on the hundred of debt not due, and asked why should it now be proposed that the Government issue paper money, which had been condemned by the Democracy everywhere.

Mr. GROW was opposed to sending out twenty millions of paper money, the effect of which would be to add to the financial difficulties by continuing the hoarding of specie by the banks and usurers. He wanted time for deliberation.

Mr. LAMAR was glad there is evidence of improvement in the way of legislation. Nothing had afforded him more satisfaction than the remarks of the gentleman who had just taken his seat. He recollected that that gentleman, in the last Congress, reported bills relating to the Territories, and caused a vote on them by moving the previous question.

Mr. GROW replied that he had reported no bill that had not been printed for at least ten days.

Mr. LAMAR, responding, said that not even the privilege of amendment was permitted by that gentleman and his friends.

Mr. GROW would ask the gentleman from Virginia to refer to a single bill he had ever pressed, which had not been discussed for at least four days. He supposed the gentleman alluded to Kansas.

Mr. LAMAR said another thing had occurred in the last Congress. Bills were reported from the Committee on Lands, not even printed, and forced through under the operation of the previous question. He would again congratulate the House on the prospect of improvement in legislation.

Mr. GLANCY JONES gave notice that he would ask for the consideration of the bill on Monday.

The Committee then rose.

On motion of Mr. SMITH, of Virginia, the Special Committee charged with the examination of the subject of public printing was directed to extend their inquiries to the binding, engraving, paper, and publication of the debates in the Congressional Globe.

Mr. BANKS introduced a bill authorizing the people of Kansas to form a Constitution and State Government, preparatory to admission into the Union, with all the rights of the original States. Referred to the Committee on Territories.

The joint resolution introduced by Mr. TAYLOR, of New-York, was passed. It provides for paying the arrearages of the salaries of members at the commencement, instead of the end of the session.

Adjourned.

United States Supreme Court.

The Utah Expedition.

St. Louis, Friday, Dec. 18.

The Leavenworth Herald of the 10th inst., speaking of the Express Messenger from Utah, says that he passed Colonel Johnston's command near Fort Bridger, and that the baggage and provision trains were all safe. The troops were in good spirits. This was the only news that had transpired relative to the Utah Expedition.

The Weather at Schenectady.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Friday, Dec. 18.

The weather here is cloudy and the wind south-west. The thermometer stands at 48°. Thirteen trains of thirty-five and forty cars each, loaded with freight from the West, have arrived here since daylight this morning.

Burning of a Hotel.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Friday, Dec. 18.

The Exchange Hotel in this place was destroyed by fire last night.

The America Outward Bound.

HALIFAX, Friday, Dec. 18.

The steamship America arrived here from Boston at 1 o'clock this morning, and sailed again at 3 o'clock. Weather clear and calm.

Political.

The "Young Men's Democratic Union Club of which STEPHEN D. DILLAYE is President, held a regular meeting last evening, at which the following [illegible] were adopted:

[illegible] Party was founded, also on which it has formed and controlled the policy of this Government from 1801 to this time, has also been among the first to carry out those principles on all national questions; therefore,

Resolved, That the people of the United States have great cause to congratulate themselves upon the prudent wisdom which, in a time of unexampled political excitement, calmly selected JAMES BUCHANAN as the Chief Magistrate of the nation. That his whole course of national policy, marked as it has been by prudence and wisdom, statesmanlike capacity and unswerving firmness, has daily added to the honors of a [illegible] our approval, and should meet that of every citizen to his country; that its doctrines and its policy are eminently sound and Democratic; and that its suggestions with regard to the Territory of Kansas are wise and conservative, well calculated to meet the exigencies of the case, and deserving the support of honest men of all parties and all sections of the Union.

Resolved, That to the general confidence in the wisdom and fairness of JAMES BUCHANAN, inspired by the manner in which his administration has been conducted, we owe our success, as a party, in our recent State election, and that the triumphant result of that election assures to him the cordial support of the Empire State and the active sympathy of its Democratic masses.

Resolved, That we congratulate the country upon the election of JAMES S. GOSE of South Carolina as Speaker of the House of Representatives, as of a Democrat whose national views are as broad as the Union, and as conservative as the Constitution, and that the Democracy of New-York tender to him their profoundest acknowledgements for the marked and impartial manner in which he has selected the Committees, with reference not only to the best interests of the States, but to the commerce and importance of this the first commercial city of America.

STEPHEN D. DILLAYE, President.

Late from Tampico.

FULL DETAILS OF THE LATE CONSPIRACY.

From the N. O. Picayune, Dec. 12.

The schooner W. W. Harness, Capt. CHURCH, from Tampico the 3d inst., arrived at this port yesterday morning.

The general news by this arrival principally concerns the late political conspiracy, which came so near proving fatal to the existing government of the State—full particulars of which will be found in the following extract from a private letter, politely placed at our service:

TAMPICO, Monday, Nov. 30, 1857.

Under separate cover I send you a newspaper containing a proclamation from the Commander-in-Chief of the military forces to the inhabitants of this city, by which you will perceive that the talent of designing politicians, together with the wealth and influence of the clergy of this country, have been employed to subvert the present system of government, even at the sacrifice of the lives of all who oppose its enemies. On the 15th inst., while Gen. MORENO and his principal officers were enjoying a late week feast at the residence of the second military commander, the house was attacked by about twenty soldiers, under orders of a person by the name of JUAN CHAMBLE Y RAMOS, who, [illegible] voices of mutiny, mortally wounding one of the General's aids, while the greater number of the party were made prisoners, including during the previous ten days, [illegible] seven wounded. Four hundred of their force have been detached and sent to Merida, the Government there fearing a pronunciamiento.

By this arrival our previous reports of the capture of Sisal by the Campeachy troops is confirmed. The attacking force was commanded by Antonio CAMPO PELAEZ. He had one man killed and three wounded. The enemy lost three killed and six wounded. The victors captured four 24 pounders, and [illegible] two 12 pound carronades, and a quantity of munitions. They also took several prisoners, and a little armed vessel called the Carmen.

The news thinks that the capture of Sisal has insured the triumph of the revolutionary party. Immediately afterward more than a hundred [illegible] came over to the Campeachy party. The [illegible] expected vessels to follow to Sisal, and to [illegible]

From the Picayune, Dec. 12.

We were this morning placed in possession of further intelligence by the schooner [illegible] Gabriel, in the last [illegible] days [illegible] ing. It is most interesting and [illegible] outlinists had been repulsed from [illegible] and was, at last advices, in the [illegible] power of the Revolutionists.

It seems the bombardment of the town was a [illegible] one, and the Revolutionists had [illegible] for [illegible] till reinforcements could come up.

The Revolutionists, however, were [illegible] Some four or five armed vessels were [illegible] cruising between Campeachy and Sisal, and the interior port was in a state of blockade.

Things at Campeachy were in [illegible] siege progressed warmly, as from the [illegible] The number of the besiegers, when the [illegible] was from 600 to 800 men. They hold the road to Merida. The result of the fierce struggle is [illegible] sible to predict.

THE LONG ISLAND RAILROAD.—The Long Island Railroad Company has been [illegible] Summer, and by the judicious expenditure of labor and lumber, so fenced in the road throughout its whole length at every cut, that they have no longer any fears of snow-storms. Wherever they could get permission from owners the fence has been [illegible] well built, and where they could not do that they have set them up their own [illegible] fall of snow-drifts snow never has fill on the island for an hour—would be sure to drift into cuts and blockade the road. Probably we shall have more of this nonsense hereafter, but [illegible] will be at next New-York in January or February.

[illegible] in the Times of to-day. You say that [illegible] was "self-deceived" when the language of the clauses in the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty [illegible] the Mosquito protectorate "lacks [illegible]." This is directly the reverse of the opinion [illegible] Johnson, high authority on such [illegible], who says: "Language could not be [illegible] adapted to the purpose."

[illegible] in consultation with many eminent lawyers and statesmen, in and out of the Senate. The latter of the two clauses was added on the motion [illegible] among others, Mr. PRESTON SOULE, formerly Johnson and others thought it purely [illegible]. Is it likely that all these gentlemen [illegible] England considered ex[illegible] under the treaty, why was she [illegible] except British Honduras from it? [illegible] political negotiator ever ventured to deny the [illegible] construction?

[illegible] one has said he could find heresies even in the Lord's Prayer. Is it possible to compose [illegible] which interest and passion cannot pervert? England knows that this Isthmus is to be the [illegible] to the trade of the East; that a ship canal across it would bring to our doors the commerce of the world, and transfer to us the sceptre of the seas.

Yet, for three years after the negotiation she made no attempt to put a wrong construction on the Treaty. Lord JOHN RUSSELL, speaking for the Aberdeen Ministry, in 1853, expressly concurred in the [illegible] construction. But when Lord [illegible] succeeded, the wind blew from another quarter. Of PALMERSTON I happen to know [illegible]; Hamer Burwell, reading the treaty, frequently expressed his apprehensions.

In January, 1856, Messrs. CASS and DOUGLAS, in open Senate, declared vigorous war upon the treaty and its author. These gentlemen were the known heads of the party about to assume power. Lord PALMERSTON gladly embraced the opportunity which May, the same year, came Lord CLARENDON's dispatch, with the opinion of Mr. Queen's Attorney HARDING.

It is amusing to see the difficulties these gentlemen labor under. The Queen's Advocate, anxious to establish the Mosquito Kingdom, insists that he may send an armed force to Central America, provided he does not "occupy, or forcibly appropriate, or assume dominion;" while the United States as stoutly maintains that this word "appropriation" means, in diplomatic sense, a military occupation; therefore, they cannot land a soldier there, but may occupy in some other way. In any language safe from miserable quibbles like this.

If I had time I would show how this question has been managed since Mr. CLAYTON left the Department of State. I fear that it is as far from settlement as ever; that England will be able to secure us in the future as she has done in the past [illegible] that with wiser and bolder men occupy the Executive Chair. The beautiful region [illegible] by petty quarrels, and dismembered by [illegible]. Yours, WM. WALKER.

DEVREUX.

Bank Management.

THURSDAY, Dec. 17, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your paper of this morning a comparison is drawn between the action of our Banks and that of the Bank of England during the course of the [illegible] panic, namely, in the loans, as follows:

New-York, Aug. 8	$122,077,000
New-York, Aug. 17	97,816,000
[illegible]	[illegible]
London, Sept. 12	93,230,000
London, Oct. 26	126,750,000
[illegible]	98,450,000

[illegible] which it appears that the opposite policy was [illegible], and which you characterize, and very [illegible], as "Contraction and Bankruptcy" and "Confusion and Relief."

The Banks have most undoubtedly facilitated their own dishonor, which, from the course they [illegible], was sooner or later inevitable, while an [illegible] have saved themselves and [illegible] banking and commercial firms from the [illegible] that met them. When failures came fast and [illegible] the Banks here, taking the alarm, being [illegible] strongly with the panic, clenched tighter and tighter with iron grasp the millions they held [illegible] thus burying their talent in the sand, and [illegible] result showed the effect of their stewardship. The different advocates of the course pursued by our banks seek to justify them by pointing to the line of conduct of the United States Bank of Pennsylvania under the then sole management of [illegible] NICHOLAS BIDDLE, when he [illegible] to monopolize the entire cotton business of the country as an instrument of affording relief. The result proved, what every second-class [illegible] should understand, that the shoemaker should stick to his last.

One of our City journals has undertaken to stigmatize the present action of the Bank of England [illegible] such unlimited relief to bankers and [illegible] in times of such great distress as came over the country during the height of the panic, [illegible] the same result to that institution that befell the Pennsylvania mammoth above referred to; but that journal has not placed in juxtaposition their different rules of action; for while the one undertook to control almost the entire commerce of the country, the other has adhered strictly to a bona fide system of banking operations, granting indulgences and accommodations only on adequate securities in hand, and only on such securities as are available in time of need. In this way the Bank of England, countenanced and sustained by the general Government, has [illegible] upheld and carried through many bankers and merchants who are the honor and glory not only of their own country, but of our own; and since the storm, as is generally believed, has well nigh passed over, the Honorable the Governor and Directors of the Bank of England cannot but look back with the proud satisfaction of having been instrumental in saving, to a very great extent, their country's probity and honor. JUSTITIA.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company's Vessels.

Some remarks appeared in Thursday's Times, copied from San Francisco journals, referring to the excitement in that city growing out of the loss of the Central America, and reflecting on the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's vessels. We have received the following communication on the subject from a trustworthy source, and give it publication. Our correspondent is correct in stating that the Inspectors and others who examined the Pacific Company's vessels have reported favorably on their seaworthy condition.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

[illegible] have been only as many accidents to the machinery of these vessels caused no delay; [illegible] the main shaft, required a [illegible] The machines arrived at Panama five days beyond the appointed time, with six days later dates from San Francisco than usual; so this vessel lost nothing.

The reports of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company [illegible] to misrepresent public character with truth, [illegible] following in the San Francisco [illegible]:

[illegible] GARD.

[illegible] WHERE WE ARE NOW.

[illegible] has been much stirring up the public [illegible] days as to the seaworthiness of the Pacific Company's vessels, we deem it but [illegible] to the Company, to [illegible] surveys upon the [illegible] Panama, while leaving the [illegible] port for Panama—the reports of which will be made public. Yours, respectfully,

FORBES & BARCOCK.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4, 1857.

They have since [illegible] United States Inspectors of Hulls and Boilers [illegible] of New-York [illegible] competent inspectors of their [illegible] Golden Gate [illegible] making four out of the six steamers in active service. The two not yet examined, the Golden Age and Sonora, are the newest steamers in the line. The steamer Oregon, which was advertised for temporary service to Oregon, and is not one of the steamers generally in commission, was withdrawn for repairs deemed prudent after more careful examination, and another steamer substituted.

The Pacific Company commenced operations in 1849, and neither life nor property has since been hazarded by unseaworthy steamers. The good condition of its steamers is proverbial with underwriters and passengers, and no better witnesses can be adduced. Not one life has ever been lost in the Pacific by marine disaster in any of these vessels. Long experience and the underwriters are certainly more discriminating judges than ignorant persons in a moment of public excitement. The pretext of this clamor is the news of the loss of the Central America—a steamer in which, as to ownership and employment, the Pacific Company had no interest. Yet it is asserted that she was unseaworthy, and ergo the Pacific steamers are unseaworthy. As to the Central America, the public mind is now made up.

The "abuse of mechanics" complained of is simply the avowed intention of the agents of this Company to publish reliable surveys of steamers, which had most singularly become the object of attack by certain persons in San Francisco. This Company, it is well known, has a large machine shop at Benicia, and the men and material for prompt repairs to its steamers, consider it the soundest economy to keep the steamers always in the best repair. The Company created the requisite means, although it has kept pace with the times by adding larger and improved steamers to the original force.

The Postmaster-General, in his late report to Congress, refers to this Company as follows:

"In connection with the Pacific service, the only recommendation made by the report is that having reference to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. By its terms the contract with this Company for semi-monthly service from Astoria, by San Francisco, &c., to Panama, expires on Oct. 1, 1858, while, under the decision of the Navy Department, the contract of the connecting lines on this side runs until Oct. 1, 1860. Therefore, to keep up the connection with the Pacific line, as provided by law, and as originally contemplated, it will be necessary to extend the contract on the Pacific for one year; and as the Pacific Mail Steamship Company have performed their service generally in a highly creditable and satisfactory manner, the Postmaster-General recommends an appropriation for such extension."

This record, and the public reports of most rigid surveys, may well silence clamor based on error or passion.

Appeals for the Suffering Poor.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

DEAR SIR: What shall be done for the uncomplaining-suffering, starving poor in this City? After all our benevolent provisions for this numerous class of persons, we meet with many cases unrelieved, and that would not be known but for the pains-taking labor of the faithful missionary.

Mr. C. met a case of extreme want at No. — Varick-street, in the rear—a widow and two small children—Mrs. T. This woman has been earning a living for nearly eight years with her needle, but not being able to get work, she could not provide bread for her little ones. One of them was asking a crust of bread, the first he had eaten since 12 o'clock the day before. Are there not hungry thousands in this City who would gladly make themselves more blessed by giving of their abundance to such sufferers?

The same gentleman writes "I found one of our Sunday scholars waiting for me, to tell me his father was sick." But judge of my surprise when I found his sickness was principally owing to hunger. There sat his wife and two children, but no fire and nothing to eat. The dear little boy was eight years old. He had been out and begged something for himself and the other child. My heart is full. I never witnessed a case of greater suffering in my life.

These may serve as specimens of many cases of suffering we meet with. We have no fund to go to for assistance. All our means of help comes from private individuals. We are thankful to God that some generous hearts have been open to help us—men who unite their alms with their prayers. May kind Heaven bless them! In this way we have relieved hundreds of families when in distress.

As cases of suffering multiply with the advancing Winter, who will come forward with means to meet such case of real suffering? We need clothing, fuel, food, or money, which answereth all things. Relief may be forwarded to JOHN COXE, No. 123 Charlton-street, to BENJAMIN LANDRETH, No. 189 Mott-street, or to the writer, No. 366 Broome-street.

In behalf of the Colporteurs of the New-York Conference City Mission.

WILLIAM H. SMITH, Missionary.

Medical Items.

The Concord, N. H., Congregational Journal gives the particulars of the death of a young lady, named HELEN M. KITTREDGE, of vigorous physical powers, at Nelson, N. H., suddenly while taking a rum sweat for some trifling illness.

SAMUEL OSBORNE, of Wells, Me., had been failing in health for some time, and latterly had been so afflicted with neuralgic pains that he could get but little sleep. One of his friends who had been similarly troubled and had found relief by the use of morphine, recommended the use of it to him. Mr. OSBORNE sent to Kennebunk by mail for the morphine, and received it from the apothecary without any directions for its use, and being ignorant of its power he took an overdose, and so died.

The Rhode Island Medical College on Wednesday held its semi-annual meeting in Providence. About thirty-four members attended, says the Journal of that city. Dr. H. I. BOWDITCH, of Boston, was present, and favored the Society with his views and the results of his extended observations, in relation to the effect of different localities in inducing consumption. Dr. BOWDITCH believes it is probable that in the arrangement of Divine Providence, almost every town possesses some locations, enjoying great, if not almost entire immunity from this disease; and that this may be a very important reason for collecting vital statistics of every part of the State or country. He showed that by judicious advice in this respect, patients may often enjoy as great a degree of health, and as reasonable expectations of prolonged life as they could have by going abroad for these objects.

To the practice of medicine in Beloochistan, says Blackwood, for October, there are only two slight drawbacks. When the physician gives a dose, he is expected to partake of a similar one himself, as a guarantee of his good faith. Should the patient die under his hands, the relatives (though by no means bound to exercise it in all circumstances) have the right of putting him to death, unless a special agreement has been made freeing him from all responsibility as to the consequences; while he, should they decide on immolating him, has no reasonable ground for complaint, but is expected to submit to his fate like a man and a hakim. In other respects the amateur will find an easy field.

M. PERREY, the editor of the well-known medical journal, the Moniteur des Hopitaux, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for speaking (not in his journal, but by word of mouth) disrespectfull of the Emperor of France.

O'BRIEN BELLINGHAM, M. D., F. R. C. S. I., &c., and author of a treatise on diseases of the heart, recently died at Edinburg.

COL. RICHARDSON.—A rumor has been industriously circulated by the Administration Press, that Col. RICHARDSON, before receiving the appointment of Governor of Nebraska, formally gave in his adhesion to the President's Kansas policy. Now precisely the reverse of this is the fact. The writer was in Washington when the appointment was made, and we know, and are authorized to say, that before Col. RICHARDSON would accept of the appointment, he took with him a distinguished political friend and waited upon the President, to whom he distinctly stated that if the acceptance of the appointment involved the necessity of his separating from Judge DOUGLAS in his opposition to the proceedings of the Lecompton Convention, or required his approval of the doctrines of the Message in relation to Kansas, he must respectfully decline it. To all which Mr. BUCHANAN replied that he had been nominated simply on the ground of his fitness for the station, and that he was at full liberty to think and act as he pleased in relation to the Kansas question and Judge DOUGLAS.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE BANK OF BURLINGTON.—The Old Lady in Threadneedle-street has thrown Bloomer. To the alarm and consternation of her relations and friends, she has been exhibiting herself in tights.—Punch.

[illegible] Secretary of the Treasury, [illegible] Washington, [illegible] Nov. 17, 1857.

[illegible] Sir: [illegible] the Commander of the Army under the President [illegible] the honor to transmit herewith his annual report of the general condition of the army.

Our regiments, horse and foot, including artillery, (serving mostly as infantry,) are, as I have remarked in former reports, anything but a peace establishment. For years they have been almost constantly in hard suit of hostile Indians, through swamps and mountains, in heats and snows, and with no inconsiderable loss of life from frequent combats, and a still greater mortality from excessive labor, deprivation and disease. In other wars those hazardous services are occasionally broken by rest and comfort, most long unknown to nine-tenths of our troops; and hence another great evil—the numerous desertions which daily thin their ranks.

As a partial illustration of the extraordinary activity and sufferings I have spoken of, I beg leave to annex copies of two of my orders—Nos. 4 and 14—of the present year.

To mitigate those evils, and to enable us to give a reasonable security to our people on Indian frontiers, measuring thousands of miles, I respectfully suggest an augmentation of at least one regiment of horse, (dragoons, cavalry or riflemen,) and at least three regiments of foot, (infantry or riflemen.) This augmentation would not more than furnish the reinforcements now greatly needed in Florida, Texas, New-Mexico, California, Oregon, Washington Territory, Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota, leaving not a company for Utah. If the reinforcements should be authorized as early as January it would be easy, in the present unfortunate want of profitable employment for the thousands of able-bodied men to be found idle in every populous district of the country, to make the number of recruits needed, and in time for them to reach the theatres of military operations in the Summer and Autumn of 1858. Of the relief which the measure would afford to our general population I may not speak in a military paper, but to the army and exposed frontiers under its protection it would be immense.

It is earnestly desirable, by all the reasonable means at the disposition of the Government, to attempt the moral elevation of our enlisted men—that is, all below commissioned officers. In physical comforts, whether they are sick or in health, the justice of Congress in respect to physicians, medicines, hospital stores, the pay, clothing and subsistence of everybody, has scarcely left anything to be asked for. (The subject of quarters will be noticed in the sequel.) So, too, in respect to religious instruction, through some twenty and odd military chaplains—considering the great number of sects, and the habitual dispersion of the troops—I have nothing practical to suggest. But to render the service honorable, so that citizens may freely enlist without the fear of harsh, arbitrary or capricious treatment at the hands of any superior, some additional legislation seems indispensable. I allude to a revision of the rules and articles for the government of the armies of the United States, particularly the 45th, 46th, 50th, 87th and 99th of those articles—all respecting the administration of justice. In order, among other things, to provide for the legal punishment of petty offences, (substituting, when necessary, courts consisting entirely of sergeants,) so as to deprive commanders of small detachments and isolated companies of all pretext—the want of officers to compose courts, &c.—for taking the law into their own hands. I accordingly, I recommend that the subject be in the first instance referred to a Board consisting of intelligent officers of great experience with troops, and, if their report be approved, that it next be submitted to Congress. The same Board might, with great benefit, revise the general regulations of the army and the conflicting systems of infantry tactics now in force.

In connection with penal justice, it is due to all good men in the ranks to say that they are directly interested in the suppression of crimes, disorders and neglect prejudicial to good order and military discipline, inasmuch as offences hurt the just pride of the corps, and every offender put under guard or in arrest increases the duties and fatigues of his meritorious companions of the same class or rank.

I have a word to say in respect to quarters for troops on the frontiers. In our regular Cantonments we have but little shelter, and that confined to storing siege guns, and these are too dear and otherwise uncomfortable for the lodgings of the troops. In respect to the Indian frontiers, except at one or two favorite points for reserves, the troops are—when they chance to be allowed short rests—either in tents, Winter as well as Summer, or such miserable bush and mud huts as they have hastily constructed for the moment. Hence another cause of desertion, disease and mortality. It is true that the frontiers are constantly shifting by the extension of settlements, and hence a great difficulty in providing permanent quarters, except for reserves, and we are far from having a regiment, or even a company, to be so posted.

The instruction of our artillery regiments in their appropriate duties with light and heavy batteries, has been much neglected of late years: first, by capriciously dismounting several of the light companies, and sending others to the most unsuitable posts in respect to supplies and health; and second, by the constant employment—from deficiency in other troops—of the greater part of each regiment as infantry on the Indian frontiers.

A school of practice, however, for garrisons, sea coast and siege artillery is now being organized, on a small scale, at Fortress Monroe, to be enlarged as the regiments may be withdrawn from the Indian frontiers, when—also on regarrisoning our principal fortifications—each may be made a subordinate school. In the meantime, I respectfully ask that the light companies remaining on foot be remounted as authorized by law.

Of recommendations in former reports I beg leave specially to recall two:

1. A system of recruiting by and for the respective regiments, which, it is conceived, would create and nurture the esprit de corps—a family feeling in each—always highly conducive to moral elevation and military efficiency.

2. A revision of the Pension laws, so as to place the army on a like footing with the navy, volunteers and militia in this respect, as there can be no conceivable reason, of any sort, for a discrimination to our prejudice.

Please see vol. 2, p. 220 of the President's Message, &c., December, 1856.

I have the honor to be, Sir, with high respect, your most obedient servant, WINFIELD SCOTT.

The Trial of Col. E. V. Sumner.

From the St. Louis Republican.

Some days since, we published a paragraph in relation to the recent trial of Col. EDWIN V. SUMNER, 1st Regiment United States Cavalry, by a General Court-Martial at Fort Leavenworth, of which Col. HENRY STANTON, 7th Infantry, was President. In that publication, unintentional injustice was done to Col. SUMNER, as we learn on examination of the proceedings of the Court, published in General Orders. Col. SUMNER was put upon his trial on two charges—one, "Neglect of duty," and the other, "Conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman." Under the first charge, there were three specifications, the first of which was, that Col. SUMNER, at a periodical muster of his regiment, on the 28th February, 1857, did neglect to pay the proper regard to the officer duly appointed to muster and inspect the said regiment, and did studiously keep himself at a distance from said inspecting officer, Major GEORGE DEAS, of the Adjutant General's Department, during all the time he was occupied in said inspection. The second and third specifications embrace similar acts of "neglect of duty," in not attending Major DEAS while he was engaged in the duties of muster and inspection at the hospital and guard-house, and in the inspection of the quarters or barracks occupied by the First Regiment of Cavalry. Upon this charge, involving the construction of the regulations and rules of the service, the Court found Col. SUMNER "guilty."

But upon the other charge of "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," and the three specifications under it, the Court found Colonel SUMNER "not guilty."

Upon this state of facts the Court sentenced him "to be reprimanded in orders by the Department-Commander, to be suspended from rank and from command, and to forfeit his pay proper for the space of four calendar months."

In the General Orders which accompanied the publication of these proceedings the General Commanding coincides with the Court in the charge of "neglect of duty," "not only on a fair construction of the regulations, but on the general principle governing the service." But, General SCOTT adds: "Presuming that Colonel SUMNER was acting on a conscientious belief of the correctness of his course, while I confirm hereby the sentence of the Court, I remit the whole of the penalty contained in it."

Correspondence of the Newark Daily Advertiser.

FLORENCE, Nov. 17.—Remote as we are from the whirlpools of trade, Italy feels the tempest which sweeps the commercial world. Several houses have been wrecked through their American relations, and the newspaper reports have served to reduce American credit generally much below par. The best Wall-street paper could in fact, scarcely be discounted here now at any rate, though money is not worth over 3 per cent, in the market. Many of our countrymen have been contrained to return, and few come to take their places. American capital is, nevertheless, still strongly represented, since the circle includes Mr. WM. B. ASTOR and family, Mr. HAMILTON FISH and family, Mrs. JOHNS and Rev. Dr. PARTON, of New-York; Mr. BOARDMAN and family, of Connecticut; Mr. JARED SPARKS and family, of Massachusetts; and other well known names.

We have also a talented sculptor from New-Orleans, (EUGENE WARBOURG,) who brings commendations from Mr. SOULE, Mrs. Brown, and the Duchess of SUTHERLAND, who gives some promise of respectable attainments in the profession. A panoramic view of the journey from Boston to Washington, is also just now among the American novelties here.

MICHIGAN DEMOCRACY.—The Young Men's Democratic Association of Detroit held a meeting on the 14th inst., at which resolutions were passed sustaining Senator DOUGLAS in his opposition to the President's policy, and censuring Mr. BUCHANAN for that part of the Message which relates to Kansas. The other wing of the Democracy got access to the meeting, Recorder MORROW, among others, imploring the faithful to abstain from fulmination with the "black Republicans," and in the midst of a lively harangue, the gas was turned off, and the whole party was left in darkness; whereupon the meeting adjourned in disorder.

NATIONAL POLITICS.

[illegible] of Vice-President Breckenridge in Baltimore.

[illegible] The Democratic Club formed in honor of the nomination and election of Governor WISHART, repaired to the residence of Governor WISHART, where, in response to a speech of welcome, Mr. BRECKENRIDGE spoke as follows:

"He thanked the members of the Club for the honor conferred upon him in assuming his name as the title of their organization. He had understood that its purposes were temporary, and that it was formed to aid the triumph of Democratic principles in the great contest of 1856, and had disbanded after the election. They had reorganized, to-night, under their old banners to greet and welcome him to the Capital of Louisiana, and for this demonstration of confidence and esteem he felt a grateful sensibility. If a friendly appreciation of his past services had induced them to confer his name upon their Association, he hoped his short future political career would develop no characteristics which would cause them to regret their generous bestowal of esteem. The truths of Jacksonian Democracy were the guides of his youth. In his manhood he had sought no new allegiance; and now, with the facilities and power of a wider experience, he felt as true a devotion to those principles as that which moved the enthusiasm of his boyhood. He then adverted to the issues which marked the canvass of 1856. The Democratic Party had achieved a glorious success then, and must triumph in all future contests, if it but maintain, unchanged, the principles which animated and governed its earlier struggles. That party derived its creed from the Constitution. It subjected all measures to the crucible of the Constitution, and if the test discovered alloy, it rejected them as dross, though their glittering appearance attracted admirers. A high regard for equal rights of the States, municipal and individual, had marked the career, created the success, and established the permanence of the Democracy. Its organization was formed by the spirit which counseled our forefathers to draw their swords against the aggressions of the mother country. It arrayed opposition to the Alien and Sedition Laws of the elder Adams. Its first success was to erase those iniquities from the Statute-Book. Those laws infringed the rights of citizenship by conferring upon the President the power to expel from the country whomsoever he deemed obnoxious to its welfare, and established a censorship over the Press which would have made it unfit to guard the liberties of the people, or afford them knowledge. The President was endowed with the triple function of accuser, witness, and judge, powers which made him a despot, and the people so insecure in the enjoyment of their natural rights as scarcely to deserve the name of freemen. It attacked the United States Bank because that institution possessed monopolies in derogation of common right, and was the usurping powers inconsistent with the genius of our Constitution. He next referred to the efforts of the Democracy to abolish the inequalities of the protective system. It nurtured the manufacturing interests, while it depressed the prosperity of agriculture. It was not his intention to discuss the political topics of the day.

Those questions had been settled by the irrevocable fiat of the Democracy—the party which, having for its basis the Constitution, had survived the mutations and caprices of public opinion, and amid the wrecks which strewed the political battle-ground, still stood a proud and enduring monument of justice and reason. He spoke of the constant and unchanging attitude of the party as the advocate of State and individual equality, and in the several political crises which occurred in our history, as the only true conservator of our republican system, as originally framed. He alluded to the rise and fall of the Know Nothing Party, as having been comprised in less time than had measured the career and existence of any party in this or any other country. He ascribed its early dissolution to the injustice of its principles. It denied those, who by accident, had drawn their first breath under a foreign sky, an equal participation in the rights of citizenship, which is guaranteed by the Constitution. It was hostile to the freedom of conscience, because it proscribed Catholics. He enjoined the remembrance of the causes which drove the Puritans to New-England, Baptists to Virginia, and Huguenots to South Carolina. If we had recollected the lesson, then our country would not have had occasion for the rights of citizenship, we would not have required assurance for the guarantee of religious freedom. He dwelt with earnestness upon the necessity of the Union as the only guarantee of prosperity and happiness, and hailed the Democratic policy as the only safeguard for its perpetuity. On this subject he dwelt, with some emotion, with resistless eloquence.

Independent of its discussion as a matter of policy, he dwelt with enthusiasm and great effect upon the sublime sentiments of patriotism, which our Union, in its rise—its glorious advance and its almost limitless future, ought to inspire in the hearts of American youth.

Doubtless in the minds even of our partisan opponents, the Vice President and the rising Democracy of the West were forgotten in BRECKENRIDGE—the gallant man, the pure gentleman and the eloquent patriot.

When Major BRECKENRIDGE had concluded his address, Governor WICKLIFFE came forward and in a very cordial manner said: "Fellow-citizens, to see BRECKENRIDGE is to admire him; to know him is to love him well; I ask you all in to take a glass of wine with him."

The invitation was of course accepted, and after a pleasant intercourse of half an hour with the Vice President the crowd adjourned in the highest state of satisfaction at the result of the interview."

Position and Prospects of Senator Douglas.

From the Boston Traveller.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 11, 1857.

Every man one meets now salutes with "What do you think of DOUGLAS?" Everybody seems to be in a state of doubt about him, except in regard to the one point, that he never made a better speech than on Wednesday last. But on the two political sides there is a singular unanimity of opinion—or at least of the expression of that opinion—that the present movement of DOUGLAS is with a view of securing his reélection to the Senate. The South, however, with one voice denounce him, and vow his political death. They class him among their most bitter opposers. SUMNER, SEWARD, HALE and WILSON, and even CHASE and GIDDINGS were never denounced more bitterly by the South than is DOUGLAS at this time. And yet he stands precisely where he and his denouncers stood six months ago, when they were loud in his favor. He has now hesitated, faltered for one instant, and from that instant his doom was sealed.

The Republicans are content to look on and enjoy this battle royal among their opponents, saying nothing, except to deny that DOUGLAS can be classed among them. But when they are sneeringly told that in him they have a new leader, they generally answer in the spirit which prompted Mr. BANKS to reply to that taunt, "Sir, I am ready to follow any man who can and will lead—in the right direction." But before DOUGLAS can be classed among Republicans he must renounce squatter-sovereignty, which is his present stronghold.

All join, however, in counting the chances of DOUGLAS' reélection. It is evident that the President regards him as a rival for the succession, and is, and has been, determined to kill him off politically. To this end, Ex-Governor MATTESON, of Illinois, was selected as the Administration candidate to oppose DOUGLAS. The Governor is exceedingly wealthy, being at the head of several railroads, and being largely interested in several banks; and it has been thought that his wealth, together with the Federal influence which would be exerted in his favor and against DOUGLAS, would give him the seat. But this new movement disconcerts the plans of the Administration. Yet whether it will strengthen the hands of DOUGLAS or the Republican candidate remains to be seen. Some say that the Judge will fall between the two parties. But he asserts now a positive certainty of being elected as a pure Democrat, upon the principles of the Nebraska bill. As Father RITCHIE would say, nous verrons.

Among those who are intimate with the Judge, it is said that he is more violent against the Republicans than ever; that he declares it his determination to remain in the Democratic Party, and to bring it back to its true principles, as avowed in the Nebraska bill, and indorsed at the Cincinnati Convention. By some, his condition is compared with that of Governor SEWARD, who refused to leave the Whig and join the Free-Soil Party, saying that it was his duty to stand by his party and to bring it back to its first principles.

It is said to be the intention of Judge DOUGLAS to bring in the Toombs bill on Monday next, with the Minnesota provision, which excited so much admiration from the President—as expressed in the Message—that provision submitting the Constitution to a vote of the people; and it is thought that all the Republicans will vote for it, and that GWIN, BRODERICK, STUART of Michigan, DODGE of Wisconsin, and perhaps several others will do the same. Senator GREEN, of Missouri, has the floor to reply to Judge DOUGLAS, and it is expected will make a very savage attack upon him. If he does, his fate is foreshadowed in that of BIGLER's on Wednesday. JEFF. DAVIS is expected to follow GREEN, and he is the man most fitted to cope with DOUGLAS in his peculiar mode of warfare.

General Intelligence.

From the Boston Journal.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Dec. 12, 1857.

The Executive Departments are busy enough. News has been received that General WALKER has reached Nicaragua. News from Kansas is anxiously awaited, as somewhat extraordinary powers were given to Gen. DENVER, who was accompanied by Mr. MARTIN, the probable author of the Lecompton constitution. He is a warm friend of Mr. Secretary THOMPSON, and has been drawing pay as a clerk in the Interior Department, while aiding Regent CALHOUN in his schemes.

Gen. CASS gave a dinner party yesterday to the President and Cabinet (including the Assistant Secretary of State,) with the ladies of their families, which probably eclipsed in magnificence any similar entertainment given in Washington. The services of silver and china made for the host when he was Minister at Paris, were brought into requisition, and nothing was lacking to make the repast worthy of the distinguished guests.

Mr. Speaker COLFAX has taken the Gadsby House on Lafayette-square. Mr. CRAWFORD will be confirmed as a Justice of the Supreme Court, although strong opposition will be made by some of the New-England Senators. Col. FOREY is taking about moving his Press here from Philadelphia, and Mr. PRESS would, probably, bring the Sixth here from Richmond for a consideration; but each would be an expensive addition to the political journals of this capital.

Among the social arrivals are Gen. [illegible], Mr. [illegible], Mr. [illegible], Mr

NEW INTELLIGENCE.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—Dec. 18.

Before Judge Nelson.

William Haine vs. D. Appleton et al.—The matter for an injunction in this case was argued this morning upon the bill and answer and affidavits on the part of both plaintiff and defendants. The facts have been previously stated. The main question of fact in dispute seems to be whether the plaintiff was by the terms of his employment bound to give all his drawings to the Government. He claims that after the report of Commodore Perry was made to Government, the drawings, &c., were to be his personal property, while Commodore Perry testifies that such was not the case, and gives a copy of the General Order, made soon after the departure of the expedition, prohibiting all persons from giving to any one any drawings or notes made during the expedition, and requiring all such to be deposited with Commodore Perry. Two other artists who were connected with the expedition, also testify that such was their agreement, and that they heard the plaintiff, during the expedition, decline to give drawings which required, because of such general order.

The plaintiff testifies that he was applied to by Dr. Hawks, under whose supervision the work was issued by the Government, to obtain electrotypes from the Government of the drawings furnished for the Report; that he refused to aid in any way in getting, and did not then in state other way. How they did procure them is not made known to either party.

Important Decision in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

SEIZURE—FORFEIT FOR REFUSAL—MAINE LAW.

Thomas Leitch vs. The Master George Law.—The libel alleges that on the 19th of June, 1857, the defendant was a pilot duly licensed and qualified, according to the laws of the State of New-Jersey and the laws of the United States, to pilot vessels to and from the port of New-York, by way of Sandy Hook; that being then on board the pilot-boat Thomas H. Allen, upon the high seas, and within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of this Court, about eight miles off Barnegat, seeing the said steamship George Law (sailing under a register) approaching, drawing thirteen feet of water, and bound to the port of New-York, said steamship not having been before that time spoken by a licensed pilot, he immediately spoke said master, and offered his services to pilot said steamship into the port of New-York; to which said steamship might direct, which offer and service so aforesaid the master refused, and that thereby the libelant became entitled, by law, to demand and receive from the master and owner of said ship the sum of $32 65; that neither the master nor owner of said ship has paid that sum, but it yet remains, though often demanded, due and unpaid. Wherefore the libelant prayed process of attachment against the ship, &c. The owner of the ship interposed in the cause, and filed his exceptive allegations to the libel: 1. That the libel and the matters therein set forth are not sufficient in law to constitute a lien upon the ship; 2. That the libel does not state any service rendered to the ship which constitutes a lien; and 3. That the libel claims a penalty, and that the claim is not within the jurisdiction of the Court.

Betts, J.—Congress has not enacted specific regulations governing the subject of pilotage, into or out of the ports of the United States.

The act of Aug. 7, 1789, 44, provides that all pilots in the bays, inlets, rivers, harbors and ports of the United States, shall continue to be regulated in conformity with the existing laws of the States respectively, wherein such pilots may be, or with such laws as the States may respectively hereafter enact for the purpose, with further legislative provision shall be made by Congress. (1 Stat., at Large, 54.)

And, by the act of March 2, 1837, 11, it is declared that "it shall be lawful for the master or commander of any vessel coming into or going out of any port, situate upon the waters which are the boundary between two States, to employ pilots duly licensed and authorized by the laws of either of the States, bounded on said waters, to pilot said vessel to or from said port, any law, usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding. (5 Stat. at Large, 153.) The latter act grew out of the difficulties subsisting at this port between pilots licensed under the laws of this State and New-Jersey.

In this case the libelant was a pilot, licensed according to the laws of the State of New-Jersey, and a grave question might perhaps arise whether his privileges and rights under that license are to be determined in this case by the laws of that State or those of New-York, as the libel does not aver that the right he sets up here is given him by the laws of both States; but the decision will be placed in this instance upon other considerations, and that point will not enter into the judgment rendered.

It would seem manifest that Congress, in the enactments referred to, contemplated nothing beyond the official duties and liabilities of pilots as subjects of regulation by State laws, which were to be adopted and enforced by the authority of the Federal Government. It is declared that "all pilots in the ports of the United States shall continue to be regulated in conformity with the existing laws of the States respectively wherein such pilots shall be." Pilots, as public officers, and the acts of pilots, are provisionally adopted to be governed by the regulations of State laws until Congress shall itself legislate further upon the matter. Subsidiary provisions in State laws, which tend to the advantage of pilots in the enjoyment of their offices would not seem to be necessarily regulations of the offices themselves or of the incumbents of the offices; they might rather, as they purport to be in the laws of the State in question, (Act of April 3, 1857 and of Feb. 19, 1819, 120) be modes or penalties inflicted upon third parties for acts or omissions in derogation of the policy of the laws themselves.

This point has been ably discussed, in some of its bearings, in Conley vs. The Board of Wardens of the Port of Philadelphia, (12 How. R., 299,) and decided by a closely divided Court, in so far as to determine that the State Laws governing pilots are laws regulating navigation and not commerce. The act of Congress of 1789, therefore, constitutes such State Laws laws of the United States to that effect, and also as such, no doubt, supplies them the force and remedies applicable to statutes of the United States, in declaring and securing the right to pilotage fees when pilotage services is offered, as provided in this act, and is refused. On that acceptation the statute of a State, subjecting the owners of vessels to half pilotage fees or other penalty for refusing to employ pilots to navigate their vessels, is no infringement of the Constitution of the United States, and may be enforced by suit in the State Courts, and probably in the Federal Courts also. But the Supreme Court has nowhere determined the method of procedure by which the statutory regulation may be enforced, and, accordingly, the forms of process authorized in the United States Courts must be used, and not those peculiar to the State tribunals. (1 Paine R., 600.) The rule of decision, in many cases of jurisdiction, is derived by the national tribunals from State laws, but the law of practice in the United States Courts is universally dependent on the authority of Federal enactments or usages. The adoption of a general principle of law from the State code or its customs never carries with it into the United States jurisprudence the remedies or processes through which it was there sanctioned and executed. (1 Peters R., 175; 14 do., 67; 10 Wheat., 14.) If, then, there is in the State law a provision making such respect to pilots a charge upon the vessels, when masters or owners refused pilotage services, it would not follow that the remedy against the vessel would attend the execution of the law in the Federal Courts.

The allowance made by the State law is not the pilotage—it is a remuneration exacted from masters and owners of vessels personally, because pilotage service is refused by them, and in that way the reward the officer would be entitled to in compensation for his preparing and offering himself to the performance of this duty, is withheld, and thus a provision of law highly important to the public interests of trade and navigation is frustrated. It is not necessary to consider whether it be competent to the Legislature to impose this charge as a lien on vessels; it is not made such by positive law, and it does not become such by the marine law. The decision of the Supreme Court, before referred to, (12 How., 299,) rests upon the doctrine that the State laws are regulations of pilotage and of the owners and masters of vessels in their transactions in relation to pilotage, and is so where referred to as enacting the law of the port. The liability of the masters and owners of vessels to the State penalty would be incidental only upon the march to enforce their obligation, and as the law does not impose that obligation on the ship, it would be a strained construction to make it a charge upon the vessel. It does not appear that the master, owner, or consignee of the ship, or any other person, has any property in the ship, or a lien which would attach upon her, or a claim in consideration of the ship.

The exceptive allegations to the sufficiency of the libel and the right of action against the ship upon the facts stated in the libel are sustained, although not the ground of demurrer, with costs. (Decree accordingly.)

For plaintiff, Messrs. Ullmann and Roberts.
For defendant, Mr. Wm. Tracy.

The Croton Reservoir Cases.

SUPREME COURT—General Term—Dec. 18.

Before Judges Mitchell, Roosevelt and Clerke.

The mandamus cases against the Croton Aqueduct Board in relation to the building of the new Central Reservoir in Central Park, came on for hearing this morning, on an appeal by Dinsmore & Wood from the order denying their application for a mandamus to compel the Board to entertain their bid, and also, on a similar motion for a mandamus by Cummings, which was ordered at Special Term to be heard in the first instance at the General Term. Messrs. Abbott Brothers and Charles O'Conor appeared for Dinsmore & Wood, Mr. Field for Cummings & Co., and Messrs. Busted and James B. Winning for the Croton Aqueduct Board; the latter gentleman, in fact, representing the successful bidders, Fairchild & Co. The argument was commenced by Mr. O'Conor, and will be continued on Saturday, when the Court hold a special session to dispose of the case.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—Dec. 18.

Before Hon. Justice Edwards.

THE SEWERS CHARGE FRAUD.

Barrian vs. The Mayor, &c.—On the calling of this case yesterday, word was sent down from the General Term that Judge Roosevelt was desired to sit there to hear the Croton Aqueduct case. Judge Clerke was very busy preparing opinions in several cases, and Judge Peabody declined to sit, on the ground that Judge Sunderland had received his certificate of election, and he therefore thought that his powers had ceased. Mr. Devlin was therefore formally called, and the case then adjourned until Monday at 11 o'clock.

THE JOSEPH WALKER CASE.

Anson Herrick vs. The Mayor, Comptroller, &c., Oliver H. and Walter R. Jones, &c.—The plaintiff obtained an injunction against the defendants restraining the Mayor and Comptroller from paying to the Messrs. Jones any money for raising the ship Joseph Walker. Last term, Mr. Carter, counsel for Oliver H. Jones, took the default of the plaintiff before Judge Peabody, dismissed the complaint and, in accordance with the prayer of his answer, obtained a judgment against the City for the sum due for raising the vessel. On its being ascertained that Judge Peabody was related to Mr. Jones by marriage, Mr. Carter noticed the case for this term, before Judge Roosevelt. It came up this morning, and Mr. Busted desired that the default should be opened. He stated that some sixty cases against the City came on each day, and by an accident this case was overlooked.

His Honor ordered that the default should be opened, and the Corporation be allowed to come in and defend.

Before Hon. Judge Peabody.

INTERESTING FRAGMENT CASE—MISJOINDER OF PARTIES—WHAT CONSTITUTES A COMMUNITY OF INTEREST.

The Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company vs. Henry H. Goodman and thirteen other defendants.—The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. PEABODY, J.—This is a demurrer to a complaint. The plaintiffs in their complaint state that some time prior to the commencement of this suit they deposited with the defendants, Goodman, Bates & Whiton, composing the firm of H. H. Goodman & Co., in the City of New-York, securities to the amount of nearly a million of dollars of several kinds for sale for their (plaintiffs') account. The securities thus deposited are said to have been all of them for sale, and as to some of them, H. H. Goodman & Co. were also authorized to hypothecate them as collateral security for loans they might be able to procure for plaintiffs, and as to others they were only authorized to sell. For loans they were also allowed to give the notes of plaintiffs, indorsed by Apperson, and to this end plaintiffs left with them notes or papers signed in blank by plaintiffs, indorsed by Apperson to enable them to write and fill up notes therein as they should be able to use them from time to time.

The authority given by plaintiffs to H. H. G. & Co. was in writing, and was set forth in the complaint.

The complaint then proceeds to state different transfers and deliveries of said securities to ten separate defendants and states in one way and another the different contracts under which they were sold, pledged or otherwise delivered to each of the ten parties defendant, stating the case of each of the defendants separately. As to each of them, it states the reason why the contract between that defendant and H. H. G. & Co. was void, and then proceeds to pray for final relief against the defendants, according to the case made, and then asks the temporary relief of an injunction restraining the disposal or transfer of them during the pendency of this suit.

To this complaint the defendant Ackerman demurs, substantially on the ground of a misjoinder of actions, urging that he should not be united with the other defendants in the suit, but should be sued alone, if at all, and the question presented by this demurrer I am to decide.

In the original measure lying at the foundation of this matter, the defendants have interests somewhat in common; at least, they would seem to have a common interest in the contract between plaintiffs and Goodman & Co., for on that contract depends the authority of the latter to dispose of the securities in question.

It may be said that even by that contract the agents received different authority as to the different classes of securities, so that the holders of one class of them would not be interested in the part which relates to the others, and hence that the interest is not common to them even in this respect, although the authority as to all the securities was embraced in the one paper or writing; and it would, no doubt, be true, to a very considerable extent, upon the theory of the plaintiff, which is that, by that paper, certain powers are conferred as to some classes of the securities, different from those given to others.

But, assuming that the defendants, all of them, derive their title through this as a common source of authority to the agent, and that they have a similar if not a joint interest in it, therefore, is there such a community of interest in the defendants, that they are properly united in one suit? For unless there is some connection between the causes of action so intimate that they may be said in some sense to be united, they are not properly joined. If all the defendants were united in interest as to each of the several causes of action, that would be a good reason with which to justify the union of them in one suit, but the community of interest must extend to all the defendants, and that interest of them all must extend to all the causes of action, for it is certain and very plain that in a suit against five defendants it would not ordinarily be proper to state as one of the causes of action a cause against only three of them, even though other causes embraced in the same pleading did include all the defendants. In other words, a person is not properly made defendant in a suit for a cause of action in which he has no interest, and as to which no relief is sought against him. Section 167 of the Code, in the last clause of it, requires that where several causes of action are united in one suit, "they must affect all the parties to the action."

How is Ackerman, the demurrant, interested in the claim against Murray, for instance? The transactions of the several defendants with the agents of plaintiffs are separate and distinct. No two of the parties appear to have bought or contracted for or received the securities jointly, except, perhaps, in one or two instances, where the two composed a firm, and Ackerman's is not one of these cases. The agents of plaintiffs had their securities for sale, and at different times sold or disposed of parcels of them to several purchasers. What interest has one of these purchasers in the transaction with another, or the judgment that shall be pronounced upholding or invalidating the claim of that other? It neither adds to nor diminishes his rights, nor affects them in any manner that I perceive.

If the defendants were holding by virtue of some common action, their title were the same—if some one act or transaction were the foundation of the claim against them all, there would be some ground for saying that they had such a community of interest as to make one interested in the case of the other, though even then, I think, unless the necessity for the connection might not be very apparent. If, on the contrary, their claims conflicted, and all the parties had, or might from the statement of the case have conflicting claims in the same securities, as such might have an interest in invalidating the writing held by the other, the necessity for joining them as defendants would be quite apparent.

This was in some sense the case in the great Mississippi Railroad case, which was argued in this Court a few days since. There, the contest was between the different classes of creditors, and the question was, how far the Court would go in marshaling the securities in favor of the different classes of creditors. It was there argued that the different classes of creditors had a lien on the different classes of securities, and that the Court would so marshal them as to give each class its lien, if it could do so without injuring the other classes. The Court, however, held that the different classes of creditors had no lien on the securities, but that they were all on a footing, and that the Court would not marshal them so as to disturb the rights of any class of creditors. In this case there is no such excuse for uniting the defendants, as the fact that they all received the securities from the same person, while the contracts under which they received them were distinct and independent, does not seem to me to afford any good reason for uniting them all in a suit against each to recover back the securities sold by him. Here the agent had these securities for sale. He borrowed money on one from A., who had notice that the agent had no authority to pledge it; he borrowed of B. on a pledge of it as a security, and which transferred the security to C., he passed one as security for an antecedent debt; he there by community of interest with the parties to justify a pledge in making C. a defendant jointly with A., in a suit respecting the security of B. Why? For, unless there is in the case of each defendant that which justifies the joining of the other defendants in the suit, if it related to the security of the one defendant alone, there is not sufficient cause for joining them as they are joined.

Now, if this suit were brought to recover the securities from Mr. Ackerman, what consequence would there be for joining the other defendants in it? And so, if the suit were to recover from Mr. Ackerman alone what is claimed against him in this complaint, what propriety would there be in joining the other defendants? Have they any interest in Mr. Ackerman's case? None, whatever, that I can perceive. The causes of action are separate and distinct against each defendant. Neither has any legal interest in that against the other, and the causes of action, instead of affecting "all the parties to the action," each affects only the party who holds the security to which it relates.

The causes of action are stated separately in the complaint, as they should be, and there is no joint liability of any one with the party demurring, and he is not in any legal manner, according to the complaint, interested in that of any of the other defendants, nor is any one of the other defendants interested in the controversy between him and the plaintiffs.

Suppose that the several lots of securities were each of them a house erroneously and illegally conveyed by the agents and this suit was brought to rescind the conveyances and recover them back, and suppose that one of the houses was in Fourteenth-street and one on Bowling-green, and the others were in as many different streets in this City and suppose the authority under which the agent sold all of them was, as in this case, contained in one single instrument, and was the same as to all, would there be any doubt that the causes of action and the defendants were improperly united in one suit? The foundation of the action as to each defendant, is the transaction by which he gets the particular securities he holds. The contract thus separately made with each, is the contract sought to be rescinded as to him, and the recision is sought in each case only as to and against the single defendant with whom it was made.

The particular matter in litigation, as to each, is peculiar to his own case, and no one subject or cause of action is common with loss of joint interest to them all, (Brinkerhoff vs. Brown, 6 Johns, Ch. Rep., 136,) and the numerous cases there cited seem to me conclusive on the principle of this case.

Judgment must go for defendants, with liberty to plaintiff to amend, so as to separate him from all defendants except Goodman & Co., who, as trustees, may properly be united in a suit against each cestui que trust, at the option of the plaintiff. (2 Paige 278,) on the usual terms.

SUPERIOR COURT.

Before Judge Oakley, Referee.

Charles Welden vs. Henry Maillard.—This case came on for final hearing the 16th inst. Daniel Waterbury for plaintiff; Lee & Smith for the defendant.

This suit was brought for damages for injuries received by falling through a vault hole in the pavement of Henry Maillard, in Broadway, near Houston-street. The counsel for plaintiff in opening stated that this was a case more appropriate for a Jury from the nature of the injuries, but to avoid publicity to some parts of the medical testimony, it was finally brought before a Referee. That the plaintiff is connected with one of the daily papers of this City—the defendant a well-to-do French confectioner and hotel keeper. The facts of the case he further said, were these:

In August, 1856, Mr. Welden attended the funeral of Dr. Wilson for the purpose of reporting the same. As he left St. Thomas' Church and was crossing the pavement towards the carriage in the rear of the hearse, he stepped upon the round cover of the coal-vault in front of defendant's residence, which being out of repair and unfastened, turned at right angles with the pavement, allowing the plaintiff's leg to pass through, and the whole weight of his body to come down upon the up-turned iron edge, rupturing the bladder and resulting in other injuries of a still more serious nature. The plaintiff was directly helpless, faint and bleeding, into the carriage, and taken to the Astor House—thence he was assisted to his hotel. His injuries were so severe that his recovery was for some time doubtful. He was confined to his bed by a long, dangerous and painful illness, put to extreme suffering of body and mind, and heavy expenses for attendance, medical service and loss of time, and although now able to leave his bed, and to some extent engage in the business of life, still he is, from hour to hour, laboring under severe embarrassment and suffering, and in addition and worst of all, there still remains, consequent upon the injuries, difficulties that will remain with him during life.

Nor is this the first accident of this kind that has happened at the same place. But a short time previous, another pedestrian unwarned fell into this same man-trap in the same manner, and suffered injuries of the same nature, so severe as to require a surgical operation. Of this accident the defendant received notice. Repeated notice was also given him of the dangerous condition of the cover, yet all this time we find him neglecting it with most unaccountable indifference. Such negligence lays the perpetrator not only open to a civil suit of the kind for damages; but, should it result in death, also to a criminal prosecution for manslaughter. By the old Jewish law the animal goring the first time was killed; but if it was shown to be the second offence, the owner himself was put to death.

The statutes of this State, after speaking of several degrees of manslaughter, further say: "Every other killing of a human being by the act, procurement, or culpable negligence of another, when such killing is not justifiable or excusable, shall be deemed manslaughter in the fourth degree."

But the plaintiff still lives, and this is not a criminal proceeding, yet we do ask for such poor relief as money can give for life-long incurable injuries received by this plaintiff on account of the most gross and culpable negligence of the defendant.

Gilbert Kniffen called as the first witness, testified that in the Spring of 1855, he fell into the same hole, which resulted in an illness of several weeks; that he saw the cover repeatedly after his recovery, so loose as to be entirely removed, and that both Maillard and his agents were notified of its dangerous condition.

John Roe testified that he saw plaintiff, while walking from the Church to the carriage, fall through the hole and astride of the cover; that witness helped plaintiff out in a suffering condition, and that witness at that time saw the chain to the cover loose and swinging at the lower end.

Dr. Franklin Tuthill testified to having visited plaintiff while confined to his bed—to the suffering state in which he found him—to his good health before the injury and to his present debilitated condition.

Henry W. Peace, Edward Dayton, Thomas Webb, Wm. M. Wemer, Henry J. Raymond and Monroe F. Gale testified as to plaintiff's condition while suffering under the immediate effects of the injury, as to the severity and bleeding of the wounds received, his his attendance by physicians, &c.

Charles Myers testified as to the negligent manner defendant's vault covers were fastened the Summer of 1855, and that notice of the same was given to the occupants of the house.

Dr. Robert L. Waterbury was examined as to the result of a surgical examination of plaintiff; he testified to the condition of the injured muscles, to their office when in a healthy condition, to the severity of the injuries, to the natural consequence that they were caused by external injuries, and to the hopelessness of relief.

Dr. J. A. Smith corroborated Dr. Waterbury, and testified further that the muscles had been lacerated, and could never recover their normal condition, as these muscles are delicate and short, and had healed by the deposition of tendonous tissue, which is destitute of contracting power.

Dr. J. W. Gouley testified to having made a surgical examination of plaintiff; that the muscles were so torn that they will never regain their original tone, and that the plaintiff will never recover from the injuries.

Much other evidence bearing upon the case was elicited.

The defence consisted in a rigid cross-examination of the witnesses. J. C. T. Smidt closed for the defence. He claimed that the cross-examination showed that the defendant was absent at the time of the injury, that he had not received previous notice of the condition of the hole, that plaintiff was himself to blame, and that exemplary damages should not be awarded as plaintiff had shown no malicious intention on the part of defendant.

D. Waterbury, closing for plaintiff, argued that a case of most gross negligence had been made out against defendant; that the plaintiff could never recover from the injuries received, and that they were in their consequences far more serious than an injury which affects only the one injured. That defendant was not absent, and had he been, it would be an aggravating circumstance for him to absent himself, leaving the vault-openings in such a condition; that it was not material to maintain the action whether he received notice or not, and yet notice had been given him time and again; that plaintiff was walking with ordinary care from the church to the hearse; that from the aggravating circumstances of the negligence it was to be presumed malicious, and that no proof had been offered by defendant to show it otherwise; that the pleadings and history of the suit show that the defence had been for the purpose of delay, as the interest upon such a judgment as should be rendered would more than pay the expense of the defence; that the income from the amount ($10,000) claimed by plaintiff would be after all but a pitiful remuneration for his hourly suffering through life, and that such a judgment should be given as the referee conscientiously believes would be given had the suit been tried before a Jury. Judgment reserved.

Review of the Cincinnati Provision Trade for the Week ending Dec. 16.

Abridged from the Price Current.

PROVISIONS.—The demand for all kinds has been but moderate throughout the week, but owing to the very small receipts of Hogs, and the trifling quantities of the product on the market, prices have improved quite perceptibly during the week, but at the close the feeling was decidedly languid, holders more cautious to sell, and buyers disposed to hold back to wait further developments. Yesterday, nothing transpired in Lard, and the market closed dull at 9½c. and 10½c. for bbl. and keg. Bulk Meats closed dull, at 5¾c., 7c. and 8c. for Shoulders, Sides and Hams. Green Meats closed at 4½c. and 7c. for Shoulders and Hams. No Sides selling. In Mess Pork the sales were: Friday, 400 bbls., at $13 50; Saturday, 164 do. at the same; 300 do. at $13 75, and 100 do. at $14. Monday holders were firm at this rate, but we heard of no sales. Yesterday holders were anxious to sell, and $13 50 was accepted for 100 bbls.; closing dull at this price.

BUTTER.—The receipts during the week have been fair, and of Roll quite large, rather in excess of the demand, and the market must be called languid, with a downward tendency in prices, which for Roll, as compared with our last, are about 1c. ⅌ lb. lower. Summer-packed is also quite dull, and has been sold at a decline of 2c. ⅌ lb., closing dull at 16c.@18c. for common to strictly prime Roll; 18c.@19c. for choice do. in boxes; 11c.@12c. for Summer-packed, and 13c.@14c. for Fall do. 537 bbls. and 423 firkins were received during the week, and 128 bbls. and 524 firkins exported.

CHEESE.—The receipts are very large, and the stock has materially increased during the week. The market rules dull and heavy, and the tendency of prices is downward, though we cannot quote a decline. The sales during the week add up 2,500 boxes, at 8c.@8¾c. The latter for prime selected, and 11c.@12½c. for fancy brands. 12,412 boxes were received during the week, and 4,704 do. exported.

BROOM CORN.—Is in fair request

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Canada, whose arrival at Halifax is announced in another part of this morning's paper, brings one week's later news from Europe. She left on the arrival of the Adriatic at Liverpool, after a fair passage of ten days and a half. The [illegible] in the London Money market had not [illegible], though there have been further failures in different parts of Great Britain. Consols remain at about the same figure at which they stood the week before. The most interesting portion of the news is that which refers to the opening of the British Parliament, on the 3d inst., by Queen Victoria in person. The speech deplores the financial difficulties of the day, and recommends the passage of a bill of indemnity for the Bank of England. Allusion is made to recent occurrences in India, Her Majesty urges Indian affairs upon the attention of Parliament. Parliamentary reform is promised, and on the whole, the speech is calculated to give [illegible] to the people of England. In accordance with Her Majesty's recommendations the Chancellor of the Exchequer had introduced a bill [illegible] to the Bank; in the House, and a Committee of the Whole had been appointed on the subject of the infringement of the Bank Charter act. We learn from Hamburg that the panic had arrived there with great vehemence. Business was altogether at a stand still. The Liverpool Cotton market shows an advance on former prices. Breadstuffs closed very dull.

In the United States Senate yesterday, Mr. [illegible] introduced his bill to authorize the people of Kansas to form a Constitution and State Government preparatory to admission into the Union. The resolutions submitted on Thursday, calling on the President for further information relative to Kansas affairs, were agreed to. The remainder of the day was devoted to the consideration of the Treasury Note bill, but no conclusion was reached. In the House, Mr. CLEMENS offered a resolution providing for the examination of the Capitol stationery, and for ascertaining its true [illegible] thinking that he had found a inferior article to be charged to him at the bookstores. In this connection he alluded to the statements published in the Globe, implicating the late Clerk of the House, Mr. DUNLAP, in an embezzlement of the public money, and called for an investigation. After some debate, it was resolved to refer Mr. DUNLAP's accounts to a Select Committee of five, with power to report at any time, and to send for persons and papers. A bill was reported from the Committee on Finance, similar to that reported in the Senate, authorizing the issue of Treasury notes. The House immediately proceeded to its consideration in Committee of the Whole, but after some discussion, this action being thought premature, further consideration was postponed until Monday next, and the Committee rose. Mr. BANKS introduced a bill authorizing the people of Kansas to form a Constitution and State Government preparatory to admission into the Union. It was referred to the Committee on Territories.

The circumstances of the arrest of an Irishman named FARRAGH NOLAN, alias Winter, charged with the murder of a lad named CHARLES E. SAGE, of Cromwell, near Middletown, Conn., will be recollected; also, the acknowledged complicity of a sailor named BERRIAN, who, some months subsequently went voluntarily to Cromwell, and confessed that he saw the deed done, and assisted in disposing of the corpse. The people of Cromwell have, within the past day or two, been thrown into a state of the most intense excitement by the discovery that the supposed murdered boy is alive, and residing somewhere in the interior of Pennsylvania. The case is a very singular one, and is still further complicated by the fact that a human body, soon after the alleged murder, was found in the Connecticut River, and buried, under the supposition that it was Sage's, it having several marks on it leading to that belief.

A building, the residence of P. T. BARNUM, in Bridgeport, Ct., was totally destroyed by fire on Thursday night. The cost of the building was over $[illegible]. It was erected eight years ago. The furniture originally cost $20,000, but only about half of it had been returned to the house from this City, where it had been removed some time since. The insurance on the house was [illegible] $30,000 and $40,000, and on the furniture $[illegible], all held by mortgagees. Mr. BARNUM was preparing to reoccupy the premises, and the fire is supposed to have been occasioned by the carelessness of workmen engaged in refitting and repairing.

The Board of Aldermen received and adopted a [illegible] ordinance concerning Central Park. Communications from the Mayor, for using his position to influence [illegible] in the Park to vote with a particular party, they also directed the Comptroller to advertise for sale at auction for a term of ten years the ship-bridge between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, East River, with privilege to run a ferry to Fourth-street, Brooklyn. As soon as the Board [illegible] the members met with the Mayor, in Nominating and selected Clerks for the Civil and Police District Courts. The last Legislature gave the Mayor the power of appointing the Police Court Clerks [illegible] Commissioners, (and they have appointed [illegible]) and extended the terms of the Civil District Court Clerks six years.

The Board of Commissioners met on Friday night, and, having disposed of a great amount of miscellaneous business in the third reading of bills, adjourned to Monday.

The Police Commissioners held a regular meeting on Friday, at which all the members of the Board, Mayor Wood, were present. A communication was received from the Comptroller in relation to the expense of fitting up and maintaining [illegible] for the poor could only be [illegible] of the Common Council. The [illegible] the steam-cars on the Forty-second-street, [illegible] Forty-second-street, was [illegible] after discussion. [illegible] the next regular meeting, when the Commissioners will submit a definite report of their views on the subject. A number of complaints against policemen were discussed, of which [illegible] to which the Commissioners went into no [illegible].

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, [illegible] were arraigned for burglary in the [illegible] of [illegible] MILLER, and sentenced to two years and six months in the State Prison. [illegible] was convicted of grand larceny in stealing from a lady in the street a [illegible] watch. He was sentenced to the State Prison for four years and ten months. These were the only prisoners tried yesterday.

[illegible] was yesterday argued on the appeal from the decision of Judge [illegible], and the case will be continued to-day. [illegible] Walker was the only [illegible] on the [illegible] for the defendants. The matter was set down for Tuesday next. The matter of the Bowery grading fraud was postponed until Monday, as Judge ROOSEVELT was engaged at the General Term.

Judge EDMONDS appeared before the Surrogate, yesterday, and filed the necessary bond of appeal from the Surrogate's decision in the Parrish Will case. Judge EDMONDS appears for Mrs. SHERMAN and ANN PARRISH, sisters of HENRY PARRISH, and pleads for a revocation of the will.

DANIEL GILBERT, a respectable man nearly 60 years of age, who resided in Mott street, was found at a late hour Friday night, lying insensible on the corner of White and Centre streets. He was taken to the Sixth-Ward Station, supposed to be intoxicated, and died there yesterday morning. An inquest was held on the body yesterday, and from the marks of violence found on the body, the Jury were of the opinion that he had been violently assaulted by some persons, and a verdict to such effect was rendered.

The General Markets, yesterday, were more active for flour, which was in good request, for home use and shipment, at steady prices, with evidently less eagerness to sell. Wheat and Corn were dull and unchanged in value. A moderate trade was reported in Provisions and Groceries, without any remarkable alteration in rates. The movements in Cotton were light, and quotations were nominal. The freighting business was pretty vigorous.

The schooner Cortes, which was boarded Oct. 2 by boats from the United States frigate Cumberland on the coast of Africa, and temporarily detained on suspicion of being a slaver, arrived yesterday from Gaboon River, whence she sailed Nov. 1. Captain TOWNSEND complains of the harsh treatment of the officers of the frigate. The case is likely to go to the Government in the shape of an application for indemnity.

The fare on GEORGE LAW'S ferry from James'-slip to South Tenth-street, Brooklyn, was yesterday reduced from three cents to one cent. If the Union Ferry Company just saves itself at two cents, Live Oak GEORGE must be terribly out of pocket; but his boats are thronged by the people, who relish the change.

Ex-Governor Walker.

Governor WALKER's career in Kansas is closed. His letter of resignation, which we published yesterday, gives very cogent reasons for surrendering the office which, less than nine months ago, he accepted upon the urgent solicitation of President BUCHANAN. Under the circumstances of the case, we concur with Governor WALKER in the propriety of his resignation. For himself, personally, it would have been much better to have remained in Kansas, proceeding steadily in the discharge of his duties, and awaiting there whatever new instructions the President might see fit to send him. He left the office, however, in able hands, and the wise and firm manner in which Secretary STANTON has met the emergency has obviated all the evil consequences which might naturally have been anticipated from the Governor's abandonment of his position at so critical a moment.

When Governor WALKER was appointed to this post, on the 24th of March last, the TIMES declared that it would "judge him solely and exclusively by his acts." This we have endeavored to do. Some of his proceedings we have felt constrained to disapprove. But of his career, as a whole, we believe the result warrants the most hearty and emphatic commendation. He encountered obstacles of the most formidable character, and met them with marked ability and unflinching courage. He vanquished difficulties which had proved fatal to every one of his predecessors, and redeemed the office from the degradation and contempt into which it had fallen. He allied himself with no party, and, as a natural consequence, he encountered at the outset the distrust and hostility of all. But he insisted upon justice to the people of Kansas, without regard to party;—and, in the end, he secured the respect and the confidence of the most intelligent, and the most public-spirited of the inhabitants of the new Territory. Neither denunciations, threats, nor flattery had any effect upon his conduct: the violent and most discreditable abuse that was heaped upon him by the writers and correspondents in the Free-State interest did not prevent him from securing to that party the full and fair exercise of their suffrage,—nor did the threats of personal violence, which were freely made against him by the reckless ruffians in the Pro-Slavery interest, deter him from extending to them his official protection from the resentment of their political opponents.

Governor WALKER's first act upon reaching Kansas was to urge the people of the whole Territory to take an active part in the election for members of the Constitutional Convention. Unfortunately for themselves and for the country, the Free-State Party, acting under the lead of its most violent men, refused to do so. Subsequent events have shown that but for this unfortunate abstention they would have had a majority in the Convention, and would have been able to frame a Constitution in every way satisfactory to the people, under which the State would have been at once admitted. Their refusal to vote threw the Convention into the hands of the ultra Pro-Slavery Party, while it did not in the least invalidate the legality of its action. Governor WALKER, however, did not relax his efforts to secure justice for the people, and that complete control over their own affairs which had been solemnly guaranteed to them by the fundamental law. His official proclamations and personal efforts preserved the public peace, against the efforts of the professional agitators of both parties; and his impartial administration of the laws commanded the respect and confidence even of those whose partisan schemes were frustrated by his action.

Now that his career is closed, we think the whole country will award to Governor WALKER the praise of having fulfilled the duties of a most difficult position, with singular ability and very marked success. His letter of resignation shows conclusively that he abandons his office only because of a remarkable and sudden change of policy on the part of the President of the United States. For himself, he adheres to the principles which he always held, and which he was expressly authorized and instructed to carry into the administration of Kansas affairs.

AMERICAN PASSPORT SYSTEM.—Our Government is extremely liberal—to everybody but American citizens. "All the world and the rest of mankind" may come to our shores, and rove over the land, or dwell in our towns at pleasure, with never a passport, carte de séjour, or fee of any kind. But let an American visit foreign lands, and he must run the gauntlet of an army of Consuls, each of whom will exact a dollar for writing on one's passport "Good for France," "Good for Naples!" If the money stayed in the pocket of the Consul, it might be tolerated—even though the tax were unjust for no slight a service. But it is sent to our Government, instead. The Foreign Department, without any order of Congress, it is understood, changed the system by which Ambassadors, or Secretaries of Legation, gave gratuitous vises, and transferred the duty to Consulates, for a consideration.

Is it wise or right that the useless and annoying passport system should be thus bolstered up by the United States, just when it is giving way in nearly all the kingdoms of Europe? France has modified her system almost to the point of abolition, and even Austria furnishes visés gratuitously at all her embassies; so that a traveler may go through her realms with only a formal examination of passports at her frontiers. Is it not time that our State Department should give attention to this matter, with a view to the speedy abandonment of an unwise and burdensome regulation? Shall the poor Austrian Government be more liberal than the American?

What a Police May Be.

That the Police of New-York is not what it should be, nobody pretends to deny. That it can ever in the present constitution of our society be brought up to the standard of efficiency which obtains in London or Paris, we have shown good reason for doubting. But improved it must be and may, and very greatly improved. And it can do our worthy Commissioners no harm to guide their laudable ambition by the successful examples which the great foreign capitals offer to us. The police of London particularly shows us as in a glass the true direction of our efforts. The police of Paris is organized upon theories appropriate to a society totally unlike our own, and many of its excellencies (to which we think more than justice has been done) would be excesses in New-York. We can neither invite nor could we tolerate such a minute supervision of individual life and individual pursuits as is essential to the working of the French Police system. The objects aimed at by the police of London, are, however, identical in the main with those which our own should keep in view. In London, as in New-York, the Police is less an instrument of administrative authority than a guarantee of private rights. It is established to suppress disorder, tumult and noise; to regulate locomotion and traffic; to prevent and detect crime, and to execute a quiet and summary justice in the thousand instances of annoyance, imposition, and petty wrong doing, which are continually occurring in the midst of a busy and crowded City. In a word, it is to be not only the terror of the bad but the protection of the poor. If a paltry landlord attempts to tyrannize over a wretched tenant—if a riotous tenant refuses to quit the premises which he has legally surrendered—if a mechanic's employer detains his tools for an advance of wages—if a master locks up a servant's boxes—if a servant damages a master's furniture in a fit of foolish fury—if an obstinate fare slams the door in a hackman's face, or (more probable fortune) an oppressive hackman proposes to fight over the trunks of a fare impatient of "blooding"—if Smith's dog bites Brown's child—if, in short, any one of a vast procession of microscopic mischiefs suddenly supervenes in any quarter of the town, a policeman should be there upon the spot, ready with his star of peace and his baton of persuasion to restore tranquillity and establish judgment. These offices of a thorough police, though secondary and subsidiary to its great functions as a conservator of public morals and the law, and a defender of life and property, are, nevertheless, of extreme importance to the general welfare. And they can only be efficiently discharged by a police which is universally feared and respected—feared for the certainty, respected for the legitimacy of its action. These are the two great conditions of a successful police. They are fully attained by the police of London.

And they are attained, primarily by the discipline, secondarily by the numbers of the London force. The London Metropolitan Police is brigaded like a military body. It is, in fact, a military body, differing from the soldiery only in this most essential feature, that it is not armed with deadly weapons. An armed police can never be anything but a confession of municipal weakness. Before the organization of the Metropolitan Police in London, every extraordinary occasion had to be met by "calling out the troops." London then relied on the "Guards," as New-York now relies on the "Seventh Regiment" and the rest of our citizen soldiery. Since the act of 1828 was carried into effect by Sir ROBERT PEEL, London has been spared this necessity, so disgraceful to a free community. The repressive baton has dispensed with the annihilating bayonet and bullet. Under that act the metropolis, including under that term an area 90 miles in circumference about Charing Cross, and a population of 2,500,000 souls, has been kept in order and protected by a civil army, which in 1852 numbered 5,525 men, and which is maintained at an expense averaging, in the mass, 50 cents per annum to each inhabitant. The city of London proper, constituting a district in the heart of this vast circle, at first resisted the application of the Metropolitan system on no better ground than the protest of Alderman VENABLES, who fought for the City Watch, because, though it was confessedly twice as expensive as the new police would have been, and much less efficient, "it had for a very long period existed and did still exist." The citizens liked the "old ways," as the Barons before them did; they liked to hear the hour called at night, and they trusted their good old "married watchmen" because they thought them less likely to leave their beats than young bachelors might be. But in 1839 the city gave in, demanding only a "Special Commissioner;" and "London City" is now defended by an assimilated force of 542 men, making in the whole 9,055, or an average of one policeman to every 400 inhabitants, while we in New-York are confided to the care of one policeman over every 1,000 of our people.

The London Police is thus organized:

	Salary.
1 Inspector-Superintendent	$3,000
18 Superintendents, from	1,600 to $1,700
194 Inspectors, from	400 to 1,000
906 Sergeants, from	300 to 400
4,797 Constables, from	200 to 300

Each sergeant and constable receives also his clothing and a supply of fuel throughout the year.

One hundred and twenty-one police stations supervise the territory of the metropolis, which is cut off into divisions, subdivisions, sections and beats, and these Station-houses communicate by telegraph with each other. The beats are regularly patrolled by day and night, 1,000 men being on duty by day, and 3,700 by night. The beats are contracted, and the visits of the police multiplied, as the streets thicken and the population increases in density, so that within a circle of 6 miles about St. Paul's the beats are ordinarily traversed in from 7 to 25 minutes, and the most dangerous parts of the city are never without the presence of a sentry of order.

The circumstances of our social life forbid the attempt to rival the London police in proportional numbers. But they do not forbid the attempt to rival that police in discipline. The New-York policeman of to-day may dream of being a Councilman next year, but he is not therefore unamenable to discipline while he remains a policeman, and it is obvious that an increase of 100 per cent. in the numbers of our police, which is perfectly practicable, could be made equivalent to an increase of 500 per cent. in efficiency by the extension and perfecting of the system of discipline up to a point approaching the London standard. Our Commissioners have made a good beginning. Let them not relax in their efforts, and we may yet find that we have won something more than an empty triumph in the defeat of partisan recklessness at the City Hall.

Gen. Comonfort's Dictatorship.

The Address of President COMONFORT to the Mexican Deputies, published in our impression of yesterday, is characteristic of the man, and gives fair promises that, if properly supported, he will impartially perform the duties of a Dictator. The task is one of the gravest responsibility, and its successful accomplishment may be extremely doubtful; but, as a measure of necessary policy to arrest anarchy and crime in Mexico, we have advocated the creation of this Dictatorship, and have looked upon IGNACIO COMONFORT as the person best qualified for the office.

Foremost among the difficulties that Gen. COMONFORT will find himself compelled to conquer, is his own lenient and forgiving disposition. We trust and believe that experience has, by this time, taught him the fatal nature of his error when he thought to preserve the peace by an indiscriminate pardon of those who had broken it and were determined to break it again. In the history of one pronunciamento we can read the history of all. A number of men band themselves together for the purpose of plunder. Under the flimsy pretext of an imaginary grievance, they manage, perhaps, to enlist the sympathies of a few simple-minded people, but the real object of the leaders in these movements is to rob, and, if possible, get possession of the local government. The resources of the Federal Treasury have been exhausted in suppressing outbreaks which are of almost daily occurrence; for, in many instances, the physical formation of the country has so favored the rebels, that they have been able to make a long and successful stand against the legitimate authorities. When, however, they have been effectually put down, the policy of General COMONFORT, hitherto, has been most detrimental to the best interests of the Republic. His enemies, taken in arms at the cost of life and treasure, have been generally set at liberty, and they, naturally enough, have repaid his clemency by joining the first company of insurgents into whose society they chanced to fall. If these insurgents were merely isolated bands of robbers, it is barely possible that, even under the ruinous clemency of General COMONFORT, they could have succeeded in bringing the country to the verge of dissolution, where it certainly stands to-day. But they have been urged on in their excesses by the clergy, who, with the Spanish Monarchists, form what is called the conservative party of Mexico; and while the former are permitted to reap the financial benefits from such disturbances as they are able to create,—the latter expect, by their aid, to wear out and destroy the Government of General COMONFORT, and then place SANTA ANA, or any other tool who will be subservient to their will, in the Presidential Chair. There are no means to which the opposition in Mexico will not resort for the accomplishment of their ends. They side with robbers, pronunciamentists and insurgents wherever they can be found; they further the ambition of SANTA ANA, or the designs of Spain when she threatens a war; they foster a guerre de castes, and encourage the Indians to commit the most horrible depredations; and all this they do to restore that ascendancy of which, under COMONFORT's administration, the church has been deprived in temporal affairs. The struggle in Mexico, therefore, is clearly a struggle between Liberty and COMONFORT on the one hand, and Anarchy and Church despotism on the other. The party which sustains the former is greatly superior in numbers. They elected Gen. COMONFORT President by a large majority. They have granted him extraordinary powers after long hesitation, and upon full evidence that a Dictatorship alone can save the country from utter ruin. In this policy, unprejudiced outsiders will coincide. Those who have interested themselves in the future of Mexico, have had the conviction forced upon them that the people en masse are not fit for self-government. They lack that essential education which is only acquired by years of experience; and, unfortunately for them, through the corruption and personal ambition of their political and ecclesiastical chiefs, instead of advancing, they have retrograded in the path of liberty since their independence of Spanish rule.

The great question for Mexico, now, is whether COMONFORT has sufficient nerve and strength of character—whether he can command sufficient support from his constituents to enforce the laws rigidly, promptly, impartially. The success of the experiment will soon be known—if it is destined to be successful at all;—for the very first step to be taken is the reestablishment of order. President COMONFORT's promises upon this point are fair and honest, and we see no good reason to believe that he will be unable to perform them. Our people are not disinterested spectators of the struggle, and their sympathies, we can safely assert, are with Gen. COMONFORT and the Liberal Party of Mexico.

KANSAS.—The correspondent of the St. Louis Republican states that the members of the Kansas Legislature now in session, have decided not to go beyond the recommendations of Mr. STANTON's Message, but to provide for a full, fair and secret vote of the people upon the whole Constitution and then adjourn. If they do this, they will contribute largely to the solution of the whole difficulty.

Mr. Belmont's Pictures.

There was a large company of artists and amateurs at the rooms of the National Academy in Tenth-street, on Thursday night, attracted by an invitation to a private view of Mr. BELMONT's pictures, previous to the gallery being opened to public inspection for the benefit of the poor of the City. We have never before known on any occasion such an unanimity of opinion, in so large an assemblage, as was expressed in respect to the excellence of this superb collection of pictures. They are 110 in number, and all of them are the production of modern artists, and many of them are chef d'œuvres. They are from French, Belgian, Dutch, German and American artists; not one of them is of the British school. Mr. BELMONT has displayed a rare taste in their selection, and has very wisely preferred the finest works of modern artists to the mediocre productions of the old masters. There are some paintings of reputative merit, and the exhibition of them will be of great benefit to our artists, as well as a source of gratification and profit to the lovers of art. The exquisite finish of the pictures of the French and Belgian schools, of which we had seen but few good examples before in this City, is in these works carried up to the region of the marvellous. "The View in a Billiard Room," by CHARET, is a miracle of execution; there is a MEISSONIER, a single figure, but not equal to the "Chess Players" in the French Gallery. PAUL DELAROCHE, HORACE VERNET, and DE GAMP, are represented by three exquisite pictures, and ROSA BONHEUR's "Gathering for the Hunt," is equal to her "Horse Fair." There are two fine pieces from NOYON, two landscapes by GALAME, and two most charming pictures by an artist whose name is new to us, C. MERLE, who deserves to rank with the best of the French school.

The two great works of the Belgian school are by GALLAIT and H. LEYS. Among the German pictures are four characteristic landscapes by ACHENBACH. Our own artists who are represented are JOHNSON, TILDEN, FREEMAN, WILD and GIGNOUX, the latter of whom has a very fine view of Trenton Falls.

The greater number of the pictures are small, showing a tendency among Continental artists to reduce their works to the smallest possible size. There has never been exhibited here a collection of pictures which contained so large a number of works of unquestionable excellence as are to be found in this gallery. It is to be hoped that the liberality of Mr. BELMONT, in affording the public an opportunity to examine his collection, may induce the owners of other fine collections to follow his example. It is a positive injury to art to take its finest works and shut them up in the rooms of a private house, where they can be seen only by the limited number of its inmates.

The Albion Engraving for 1858.

With the return of the season of gifts and good-will, we are glad to find that our cotemporaries of the Albion make no breach in their observance of a good old custom. They this year recognize the ties which unite them to their large circle of readers by the presentation of an admirable picture of "Dr. KANE at the grave of FRANKLIN's men." This print has been excellently engraved in line by Mr. D. G. THOMPSON, after a drawing by Mr. WANDESFADE, of this City, who has lavished not less thought and feeling upon the illustration of a most touching incident in the career of a true American hero than he displayed last year in the commemoration of the noblest of English heroines. That simplicity which is the finest charm of Mr. WANDESFADE's picture of FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE presides in the disposition and design of the present work. The peaceful Alexander of the Arctic world stands "at the crest of the isthmus," in the midst of a "sterile uniformity of snow and slate." Great cliffs lower behind him; the distance shows his little vessel motionless in the ice; at his feet are the rude head-boards of those "three graves," the first and ominous traces of the abode of the objects of his search, which were revealed to this gallant young missionary of national sympathy and scientific brotherhood. The atmosphere of the scene is caught with artistic truth, and appeals at once to the imagination and the heart. Our neighbors could not have hit upon a more felicitous subject. Never were the flags of England and America united in a truer union—never did the pride and the sorrow of two great nations blend in a more harmonious tribute to the noblest qualities that dignify our common nature, than in the story of the fates of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN and ELISHA KANE. In contributing to so many American and English homes two such pictures as those of "Florence Nightingale" and its companion of the present year, the managers of the Albion have preached a very eloquent sermon of the true grounds of international intercourse, and have done renewed good service to that cause of common sense and good feeling, which we are happy to say that they habitually serve with as much of tact as of talent.

Personal.

Senator SLIDELL, of Louisiana, arrived in this City from Washington on Thursday night. Those who are anxious to ascertain finally and once for all who is to be our Minister to St. Cloud, and what is to become of WALKER, will of course devote themselves to a watchful reconnoissance of the Brevoort House.

Mr. RASMUSSEN, the new Danish Chargé in this country, arrived in the Europa, and leaves to-day for Washington. He has contributed very largely to the promotion of a good understanding between the two countries, by diffusing in each information that was greatly needed concerning the affairs and interests of the other.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The afternoon performance of "Norma," yesterday, attracted a brilliant audience, composed mostly of ladies. The entertainment appeared to give entire satisfaction; and it is evident that Mr. ULLMANN has touched a popular chord in thus providing for the fashionable unemployed.

It is announced, on the direct authority of Mr. FORREST himself, that the Oratorio of the "Creation" will be given to-night. It promises to be a splendid performance, and, in point of magnitude, will far exceed anything that has been attempted in this country. Works of this description require to be performed with unusual fullness of detail, or they lose their effect.

HAYDN'S "CREATION."—J. A. NOVELLO, No. 389 Broadway, has favored us with an elegant octavo edition of this work of the grand old master. It is a luxurious volume to possess, and is pleasing alike to the senses of sight, touch and sound. Mr. NOVELLO publishes some of the most valuable works of the musical library, and in all of them there is the same regard to tasteful thoroughness. The fine paper, the clear typography, the admirable binding, (admirable because it is strong, yet perfectly pliable,) are so many reproaches to American publishers, who, in book music, issue impossible volumes—volumes that require two strong men to keep open. But the greatest value of Mr. NOVELLO's editions is their extreme accuracy. They are correct to a note, and are therefore universally used at all the great Festivals. We are glad to hear that Mr. WEBB, the agent for Mr. NOVELLO, has arranged for the sale of these works at the Academy of Music during the Sacred Festivals of Mr. BEARDSLEY's Messiah, but to provide for a full, fair and secret vote of the people upon the whole Constitution and then adjourn. If they do this, they will contribute largely to the solution of the whole difficulty.

In contributing to so many American and English homes two such pictures as those of "Florence Nightingale" and its companion of the present year, the managers of the Albion have preached a very eloquent sermon of the true grounds of international intercourse, and have done renewed good service to that cause of common sense and good feeling, which we are happy to say that they habitually serve with as much of tact as of talent.

Personal.

Senator SLIDELL, of Louisiana, arrived in this City from Washington on Thursday night. Those who are anxious to ascertain finally and once for all who is to be our Minister to St. Cloud, and what is to become of WALKER, will of course devote themselves to a watchful reconnoissance of the Brevoort House.

Mr. RASMUSSEN, the new Danish Chargé in this country, arrived in the Europa, and leaves to-day for Washington. He has contributed very largely to the promotion of a good understanding between the two countries, by diffusing in each information that was greatly needed concerning the affairs and interests of the other.

[illegible] Cortez, of New-York, as a slaver, while lying at anchor off the river Gallinas, Kingdom of Lango, by boats from the United States frigate Cumberland. The Captain was captured by officers of the frigate (who described the scenery) as lying within sight of a place [illegible] and with cargo broken up. The officers of the Cumberland appear to have been fully satisfied that the schooner was a slaver. They hoisted English colors to lull suspicion, until they were within hearing distance; when three boats, with armed crews, boarded and took possession of the suspected vessel as a prize. Her cargo was unshipped, and her papers sent to the Commander of the Cumberland, who, after examining them, being satisfied that everything was regular, and the vessel a legitimate trader, released her. The Captain was positively short seven pieces taken by Messrs. E. A. MUNROE & [illegible] for the gun trade, and has been regularly engaged in running to the coast of Africa every year. She arrived at this port yesterday [illegible] Nov. 2, with [illegible] ivory, &c. Capt. TOWNSEND gives the following version of his seizure:

[illegible] — At 3 P. M. we boarded (from three boats) [illegible] from a frigate, said to be the United States frigate Cumberland. After getting on board we took out all the cargo, and broke open [illegible] the Captain, and [illegible] the papers. [illegible] in charge of the prize, [illegible] opening all the [illegible] and, apparently, doing all [illegible] they having been [illegible] officer of the frigate. Further [illegible] and provision barrels, and then left the vessel in a very disorganized condition. The frigate displayed the British flag during all the proceeding [illegible] any other flag seen, until the boats were alongside, and some of the men on board with drawn cutlasses.

Frequent complaints have been made of late years against British men-of-war, for their interferences with American vessels on the Coast of Africa, the most notable instance of late being the seizure of Gongo of the bark Panchita, of New-York, which was sent home in charge of an English prize crew. It is an unusual circumstance, however, to hear complaints against American vessels of war for offences of this kind.

Quebec papers notice the progress of direct trade between that City and the Far West. A few days since a hundred barrels of flour were received direct from Ottawa, Ill., having gone over a distance of 2,000 miles by railroad. The route was as follows: old Rock Island Railroad, Central Michigan, Great Western, and Grand Trunk, to Point Levi.

Mr. Lebanon Herring, Milwaukee:
Agent for Herring & Co.'s Patent Safes:
DEAR SIR: The Herring Champion Safe that I purchased of you, was in my store at the time it was burned last March. The heat was so great that it melted the brass plates and knob on the front of the safe. The door was warped so badly from the heat that I was obliged to force it open with a crowbar. I am happy to say to you, the contents of the safe were preserved in my perfect and entire satisfaction.

MUNICIPAL.

Commissioner Hogg Censured.

A Ferry to Fulton-street, Brooklyn.

THE MAYOR AND ALDERMEN IN CONVENTION.

A Day Spent—Appointment of Civil and Police Court Clerks—Alderman Tucker in a Rage—The Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met last night, President Clerk in the Chair.

An ordinance was passed unanimously recommended and laid over, to grade Hamilton-square and to fill sundry lots and streets between Sixty-fifth and Forty-fourth streets inclusive. The report of the Special Committee approving Field & Hoe's plans and specifications for Tompkins Market was received and adopted.

The Committee on Ferries reported in favor of directing the Comptroller to advertise to lease at public auction, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, East River, with the right to run a ferry therefrom to Fulton-street, Brooklyn, or some other place, adjacent thereto, for a term of ten years from [illegible]

[illegible] that the public who travel to and from [illegible] are compelled to wait at said ferry [illegible] before they can obtain conveyance [illegible] said city. The Committee are fully [illegible] that the establishment of a ferry in the vicinity [illegible] would be a great public convenience, and that parties are ready and willing to lease the proposed ferry and run boats every five minutes at the rate of one cent fare[illegible]. The Committee also state that so great is the desire of the Brooklyn public for the establishment of the ferry, that the property owners in the vicinity of Fulton-street, have agreed to furnish a slip free for the accommodation of said ferry.

Alderman Tucker moved to lay the report over until Monday. Carried.

The Committee appointed to investigate the charges in relation to the management of the Central Park, made a long report, containing the report of the evidence taken before the Committee, and concurring in the action of Commissioner Hogg for using his position to influence the men employed in the Park to vote with a party at the last election. The report concludes as follows: "Hoping and believing, from the evidence, that the Commissioners have done the best they could for the public interest, and that they intend to forward the work as rapidly and as economically as possible, and to do the work to the best advantage, your Committee would therefore report: That it appears there is no occasion to rescind the resolution creating the Central Park Appropriation."

Alderman McEvoy while speaking on the report, said that there were some things in the management of Central Park matters that appeared to him strange. He had seen it stated in the papers that the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund had taken $50,000 worth of the Central Park bonds. He was at a loss to know where the reporters got the news, as he was one of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, and knew nothing of such a transaction. He called upon the Comptroller afterwards and made inquiry. The Comptroller said such was the case. He, Mr. McEvoy, wondered how that could be done, as there was not been a meeting of the Commissioners. The Comptroller said there had not, but he had consented, as a friend, who believed it to be proper, and when the Commissioners met, they would make it all right. So far as he was concerned, it would not be right; and with his vote, still he was better satisfied with the management of Central Park affairs. He moved the adoption of this report, and the rejection of the resolutions of a former meeting attached. The report was adopted.

The President then stated that the adoption of the report carried with it the adoption of the resolutions, including the appropriation ordinance, attached.

Alderman McEvoy said if that was the case, he would move a reconsideration.

Alderman Tucker said: Suppose Mr. Commissioner Hogg had placed his place, was that any reason why they should punish the poor men who were laboring on the Park? It was charged that Mr. Hogg had abused his power. What proof was there of that? Why, an affidavit—an affidavit—that was all. He would put affidavits for anything. He had seen affidavits from men in high places that he would not give a cent for. He hoped the report would not be reconsidered.

Alderman Conover said he had offered the resolution at the former meeting in good faith, and because he had good reason for believing that there had been something wrong.

Alderman McEvoy said all the witnesses against the Commissioners were sworn and testified under oath; while the Commissioners and officers of the Park who testified, were not sworn.

Alderman Tucker said when the Committee did get by way of evidence, it was not as strong as they had expected. He had put down the testimony just as it was given, and from it he had arrived at the conclusion that there was no necessity for taking away the appropriation.

Alderman Adams said he had been in the room when the Committee were receiving testimony, and when Mr. Hogg was examined, and his refusal to answer questions intimated him that he was guilty of the acts charged against him.

The motion to reconsider was then put, and it being understood that the adoption of the report would not be an adoption of the resolutions attached, the Board refused to reconsider.

While the debate was progressing the Mayor entered the room and took his seat beside President Clerk. The outsiders looked at each other and at the members, but there was no indication afforded of "what was in the wind," until Alderman McEvoy offered a resolution rescinding that of a former meeting inviting the Mayor to meet them in convention on Monday next, for the purpose of selecting clerks for the Civil and Police District Courts.

The resolution was no sooner adopted than he offered another, inviting the Mayor to meet them on the 18th instant, at 6½ P. M., for the purpose of selecting the said clerks. It was then 25 minutes past 6 o'clock, and the resolution was adopted under the previous question. When Alderman Tucker was called on to vote, he said he was sorry to be under the necessity of voting No on so many occasions, but he thought the plan of springing the previous question was not the fair way to transact business, and he would have nothing to do with it.

Alderman McEvoy then moved that the Board take a recess for half an hour.

Alderman Tucker wanted to know what for, and receiving no answer, protested against the whole proceeding.

Alderman McEvoy moved that the Board adjourn.

Alderman Tucker called for the ayes and noes. They were taken, and the motion to adjourn was carried by a large majority.

THE CONVENTION.

Alderman McEvoy said they would now go into convention for the selection of Civil and Police Clerks, and for that purpose he moved that the Mayor take the Chair.

Alderman Tucker called for the ayes and noes.

They were taken, and the Mayor was appointed by a vote of 16 to 1.

The Mayor then took the Chair, and, rising, said: The Sergeant-at-Arms will please not allow any member of the Convention to leave the room.

Alderman Clancy said: Mr. President, as it has become necessary for us, in conformity with the Charter, to meet for the purpose of selecting Clerks for the Civil and Police District Courts; and as the time at which the terms of many of the Clerks will expire is at hand, we are now met for that purpose, I offer a resolution.

Alderman Adams said it would be necessary to have a Clerk before the resolution was read, and therefore, he would move that Mr. Valentine be Clerk of the Convention. Carried.

Alderman Clancy's resolution was now read as follows:

Resolved, That the following named persons be, and they are hereby appointed respectively, to the offices opposite their names below, in pursuance of the act of the Legislature of this State, relative to the appointment of Police Clerks and Clerks of the District Courts of the City of New-York, passed April, 1846.

Clerks of First-District Police Court—W. J. McGrath, William K. Westerfield, and James Stearns—to be assigned to the Halls of Justice in Centre-street, (the Tombs).
Clerks of Second District Police Court—Patrick McVey and Walter T. Fearis—to be assigned to Essex Market.
Clerks of Third-District Police Court—William E. Hawkins and ——, to be assigned to Jefferson Market.
Clerk of Fourth District Police Court—James Thoson—to be assigned to Washington Market.

Alderman Conover moved the adoption of the resolution, and said, as the adoption was a foregone conclusion, in order to avoid unnecessary delay, he would move the previous question.

Alderman Tucker—(Much excited)—I protest against the whole proceeding. It is an outrage. The previous question. The doors should not be allowed to leave the room. (Raising his hands.) I call it false imprisonment. (Laughter.) I for one will not submit to it. I protest against it. It is outrageous. I will not submit to it.

Alderman Gwynn moved to lay the motion for the previous question on the table. Lost. He then moved to postpone the appointment, which was also lost.

The vote was then taken, when Alderman Tucker's name was called. He rose to speak, when Alderman Gwynn said—I object to his taking part in the debate, as he has refused to act and has protested against the entire proceeding.

Alderman Tucker—Well, I'll have nothing to do with it.

The vote was then announced, and the resolution was adopted by a vote of 16 to 1. [illegible] while the Convention deliberated.

As soon as the adjournment had been declared, the Mayor and all the Democratic members began to laugh at Alderman Tucker, and at the exceedingly odd way in which the thing had been managed.

Alderman Tucker took a position in the centre of the room, and said to them all: He said he knew there was some "devilry" on foot when he saw the Mayor enter the room, but he did not suppose it was that.

Alderman Clancy remarked jocosely that Alderman Tucker looked well in the ring, (alluding to his central position,) and said to the Mayor, who was still smiling, that perhaps Alderman Tucker would have them all arrested for false imprisonment.

The Mayor then retired. When he had left, the members continued laughing and talking over their manœuvres, with the exception of Alderman Tucker, who did not cease his vituperations until he had retired from the room.

The cause of the coup d'état was a rumor that there was an injunction to be issued and put upon them when they should meet on Monday, enjoining them from appointing the Clerks.

To steal a march on the Police Commissioners, and others interested, matters were arranged secretly by the meeting last night; the Mayor was on hand, and no sooner had the meeting of the Aldermen adjourned, than the members were served with notices to attend the convention by Mr. Gallagher, the energetic Sergeant-at-Arms, and the manœuvre was complete.

The cause of so much feeling in the matter is that the last Legislature extended the time of the clerks of Civil District Courts, now in office, to six years, and (in the Metropolitan Police law) gave the Metropolitan Police Commissioners the appointment of the Police Court Clerks, and they appointed them accordingly, a few days ago.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Friday evening, the President, J. N. Phillips, Esq., in the Chair.

Councilman Scott, having been placed under arrest at the last meeting, for having left without permission, explained his conduct, and was released.

Councilman Brady objected, and made some remarks upon "arrest," inquiring "What good it had ever done?" The President made no reply, but said he would in future place any deserter under arrest, without waiting for the vote of the Board.

Several bills were read for the third time. They had reference chiefly to building drains, paying medical bills, surveys and maps, flagging and sewering, increasing the salary of the messenger to the Board of Fire Commissioners, remitting personal taxes, in favor of purchasing the portrait of His Honor Mayor Wood, filling low, sunken lots, and fencing others, remitting assessments, in favor of lighting with gas Ninetieth, Ninety-first and Ninety-second-streets, also, Bellevue Hospital and Eighty-third-street, Eighty-sixth-street, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, One Hundred and Eighteenth, One Hundred and Nineteenth, One Hundred and Twentieth, and One Hundred and Twenty-second-streets; also, Third-avenue, between Seventy-ninth-street and Harlem Bridge; also, for sheds round Tompkins' Market; in favor of donating $500 to New-York Opthalmic Hospital, and $500 to the Corlears' Hook Mission; building receiving basins and culverts near Canal-street, and also at the northeast corner of Broadway and Houston; concurring to donate $500 to New-York Eye Infirmary, $2,000 to the New-York Fire Department, $1,500 to the Children's Aid Society, and $1,500 to the Women's Protective Emigration Society. A few other miscellaneous bills completed the list.

The Board adjourned to Monday.

Police Commissioners.

The Commissioners met yesterday at their office, Broome-street. Present, General Nye, (President,) Messrs. Bowen, Strahahan, Perry, Crolwell and Mayor Powell.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed,

Upon the motion of Mr. Strahahan, the resignation of Henry Pritchard, of the Fifth Precinct, Brooklyn, was accepted.

Mr. Bowen offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the report of the General Superintendent, with respect to the detailed men, be referred to the Committee on Discipline, with instructions to report to the Board the names of patrolmen to be detailed to places required by the public institutions.

Carried.

Mr. Bowen also moved a resolution directing the Sergeants of the force to report to the Board the names of such officers, who have been prevented by exposure from performing patrol duty, but who are competent to do special duty. Carried.

The following letter from the Comptroller upon the subject of providing lodging houses for the poor, was read:

James Bowen, Esq.—Dear Sir: At this time there is no appropriation to meet the expenses referred to in your letter of the 14th inst., for renting places for the accommodation of lodgers. The estimate for the appropriation of 1857 is now before the Common Council, and such an appropriation as will be required might be added to the ordinance by the Finance Committee of the Board of Councilmen to whom the same is referred.

The 14th Section of the Act organizing the Metropolitan Police District, requires the Common Council to furnish all the necessary accommodations "for the lodging of vagrants and disorderly persons."

All the matters connected with the building and furnishing of Station-houses, or temporary houses for these and all other purposes, is generally done by the Corporation officers. The Common Council usually passes a resolution that the thing shall be done, and makes the necessary appropriation for paying the expenses, and the rest is performed by some one of the executive officers. The appropriation for the Police fund, which is made on an estimate of the Police Commissioners, and sanctioned by a Board of Auditors, does not contain any appropriation for the object contained in the resolution of the Common Council.

If these expenses are incurred, can the Treasurer of the Metropolitan force pay for them from any funds that shall come into his hands from the State Treasury? or can the Common Council pay directly into the hands of the Metropolitan Police any money for the payment of these expenses?

If the Common Council will appropriate for the object, arrangements can be probably made with persons to fit up as far as practicable the Station-houses for the accommodation of lodgers, and to wait for their pay until the appropriation is legalized. And in regard to additional rooms, if an appropriation is made for that object, also, buildings might be rented by the Finance Department for a few months, and payment could be made at the end of the term, when the Tax bill would be confirmed by the Legislature.

Very truly yours, A. C. FLAGG.

The letter was referred to the Committee.

General Nye said he had received the following communication:

Office, No. 110 Broadway, Dec. 18, 1857.

To the Honorable the Board of Police:

On behalf of citizens, property holders and others, a communication from me, of the 21st of November, was laid before you, asking for more definite action by the Board in informing the ordinance of Dec. 27, 1854, prohibiting the use of steam by the Railroad Companies on the Fourth-avenue, below Forty-second-street.

The Board have since adopted a resolution, requesting the General Superintendent to communicate the action he had taken under the resolution of the Board on the subject of Nov. 2, to inforce that ordinance. Mr. Tallmadge reported at length in a communication dated Nov. 27, which is before the Board, but has not been publicly acted upon by them.

The gentlemen I represent are desirous to ascertain the conclusion at which the Board of Police have arrived since the communication of Mr. Tallmadge to them. Allow me again to urge the matter on your attention. Very respectfully,

JOHN C. DEVEREAUX.

Mr. Bowen—I think that subject was first brought under consideration by the Mayor.

General Nye—It was.

Mr. Bowen considered it might be discourteous to act upon the letter in Mayor Wood's absence.

Mr. Perry—What is this case?

General Nye referred to the proceedings before the Board in this matter. The Board had passed a resolution directing the General Superintendent to see that all ordinances of the Common Council should be carried out, but he (the General Superintendent) did not feel that that order was quite definite enough to authorise his intermeddling with the Railway. These people of the Fourth-avenue wanted them (the Commissioners) to give a more specific order to stop that Railroad at Forty-second-street. Now, he considered it would be a great risk for the Board to take, to give any such specific order. In his (General Nye's) judgment, a more direct and judicious course to effect that object, would be by injunction. It was well ascertained now, that it was not difficult, in this City, to get an injunction, enjoining anything that walked, creeped or ran along, whether propelled by steam or any other locomotive power. There was no difficulty in that, and the question of this ordinance could be easily brought up and determined upon. He had looked into the Charter of this Railway Company and he found that the contract with the City authorities was, that should they refuse for 30 days or one month to obey the ordinance passed by the Common Council, regulating their rails, that Council might direct the track to be taken up and removed. There was a very simple remedy to remove this annoyance without asking this Board to interfere. He (General Nye) considered it was asking too much of the Board, when there was so simple, so plain a remedy in their own hands. All the Common Council had to say was, "You have refused to obey our ordinance for thirty days, and we therefore remove your track." He thought it looked like an attempt on the part of the parties to entrap the Board into some difficulties, and he was of opinion it was too much to ask the Board to interfere.

Mr. Bowen thought if there were any doubts in the matter, they should refer it to counsel to ascertain what their duties and rights were on the subject.

Mr. Devereux (counsel for the property owners and residents in the vicinity of Fourth-avenue and Forty-second-street) briefly referred to the action of the Common Council in the matter, and stated that he was not there to serve the Board into any injurious [illegible]

[illegible] General Nye thought that if they proceeded as he had suggested, they had a very simple remedy.

Mr. Devereux—We differ from the President in all construction of the Charter.

General Nye—Does not the Charter expressly state that if they refuse to obey any ordinance for 30 days, the track can be removed?

Mr. Devereux said perhaps he did not examine it with sufficient care to see what it did contain; however he had not to reproach, upon the part of his clients, all intention of entrapping that Board in any way. They wanted the railroad removed, and they considered the course they had taken to effect that object, was the most direct one.

Mayor Fowlds suggested that the matter be laid over until next meeting, when probably Mayor Wood would be present.

The matter was then postponed, General Nye promising Mr. Devereux that the Board would report definitely on the matter at the next meeting.

Mr. Bowen reported the evidence in the case of David Harrington, of the First Precinct, and moved that the charge be dismissed. Carried.

He also reported the evidence against John W. Tisdale for unnecessarily carrying off a boy of six or seven years of age to the Station-House, and moved that he be reprimanded. Carried.

He submitted the testimony in the case of J. C. Camp, charged with being off his beat, and moved that he forfeit one day's pay and be reprimanded. Carried.

Thomas Maxwell, of the Nineteenth Precinct, was fined in loss of pay for ten days and ordered to be reprimanded.

Mr. Crolwell offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Treasurer be and is hereby authorized to pay the special men in the Department, acting in the Seventeenth and Thirteenth Precincts.

This, after some conversation as to the power of the Treasurer to pay the money and the propriety of retaining these men as members of the regular force, was laid over.

The complaint against Officer Barclay, of the Sixth Precinct, for striking a person whom he had in custody, was dismissed, the complainant not appearing.

Officers Beers and Lint, of the Third Precinct, for being off their beat, were deprived of three days' pay, and it was ordered that they should be reprimanded. Lint was charged with another offence of the same character, and deprived of five days' pay. Officer Birdsall, for the same offence, was punished to the same extent.

George Quackenboss, for a similar dereliction of duty, forfeited his pay for two days, and his commanding officer was ordered to reprimand him.

Officer Campbell, for the same offence, was deprived of five days' pay, and ordered to be reprimanded.

Charles Burdett incurred the same penalty, and for the same reason.

Mr. Perry inquired if these officers all belonged to the same Precinct.

General Nye replied in the affirmative.

Mr. Perry thought the commanding officer should exert himself to stop these occurrences.

General Nye stated that he understood the Captain to be instituting measures calculated to prevent such violations of duty in future.

Henry L. Carey, of the Eighteenth Precinct, was charged, on complaint of his Sergeant, with insubordination and intoxication. As to the first, extenuating circumstances were shown, and it appeared that it was a sort of drawn game between him and the Sergeant. The charge of intoxication was rebutted. It was ordered that Carey be reprimanded by his commanding officer.

Mr. Bowen inquired whether the Captain was present when the alleged insubordination occurred?

General Nye said he was not.

Mr. Bowen wished to know how much time the commanding officers of the several Precincts spent in their Station-houses. He had visited the Station-houses repeatedly, and never once found a commanding officer present.

Gen. Nye stated that in this case the Captain was not present, because the difficulty occurred at night-call.

Officers Quackenbush and Darling on the same night refused to turn out at call, and were mulcted in a loss of five days' pay.

James Cooke, of the Sixth Precinct, refused to attend a night call, because he had a sore leg.

His commanding officer appeared, and represented Cooke as having refused to assign any reason for his disobedience when called, and described him, on the strength of the Deputy-Superintendent's opinion, as a gentleman somewhat addicted to inventing excuses for non-performance of duty.

Mr. Bowen regretted that the Captain had not seen fit to give his evidence at the proper stage of the case.

The matter was referred back for further investigation.

James T. Rogers, John Quin and T. Wisebourne, of the Eighth Ward, were charged with having absented themselves from drill. One excused himself on the ground that it was his day off; another, that he was unwell; and the third, because of sickness in his family.

Mr. Perry moved that they be reprimanded.

Mr. Bowen declared that that would not be punishment enough. We could not walk through Broadway, he said, without seeing policemen violate their duty. They hid their buttons, they slunk into stores, they lolled against casks. They were ashamed to be recognized as policemen. Now, if this mode of evading duty were not broken up, the Commissioners might as well give up the business at once as a bad job.

The officers were ordered to be reprimanded and deprived of a day's pay.

General Nye reported the evidence in the case of Robert M. Webb, of the Fourteenth Precinct, accused of having knocked down one of his wife's lady boarders, and moved that he be reprimanded and forfeit 30 days' pay. Carried.

The Board then went into secret session. Most of the afternoon was spent in balloting to appoint out of some 150 applicants three Police surgeons. No election was made. Mr. G. W. Emmons, the chief clerk pro tem., was nominated for that office permanently, and elected nem. con.

Police Intelligence.

A New Counterfeit.—Information was received at the Police Head-quarters last evening that new counterfeit ones on the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank, Jersey City, had been issued, and that it was intended to put them in circulation in the City. A telegraphic message was sent from the Head-quarters to the different Station-houses, to put the Police on their guard. This movement evidently put the intended utterers of the bogus money on the alert, for only one attempt was made to pass the money, which was in the Third Ward. The party offering the money, who gave his name as John Harley, was promptly arrested. The new bill is a good counterfeit.

An Old Man Brutally Assaulted.—As Mr. Thos. Seymour, a man 70 years of age, was standing Wednesday afternoon nearly in front of his residence, No. 150 West Twenty-seventh-street, he was brutally assaulted by Washington Smith, driver of an ice cart. He was knocked down, and kicked and beaten till he became insensible, in which condition he was found by some of his friends and carried into his house. Coroner Hills was called yesterday to take an ante-mortem examination of Mr. Seymour, but there being no immediate apprehension of his death, the ante-mortem was postponed. The facts of the assault were yesterday communicated to Justice Davison, and a warrant issued for Smith's arrest.

Charge of Embezzlement.—Henry Hogg was arrested yesterday, charged with defrauding Thos. Asten, of Yonkers, out of $2,000. Mr. Asten alleges that he gave into the hands of Hogg $2,000, in notes, and that the latter collected the money upon them and appropriated the same to his own use. The accused was locked up in the Tombs for trial.

A Liquor Store Broken Into.—The liquor store of James Aspel, No. 195 West Twenty-first-street, was entered by a burglar on Thursday night, and robbed of $18 in money and several bottles of liquor. Suspicion of the burglary rested on a man named James Rourke, as he was in the place the evening previous, just before it was shut up, and saw the clerk count the money. Rourke was arrested, and, being charged with the crime, confessed having broken into the store, but said he did it while under the influence of liquor. The prisoner was taken before Justice Davison and locked up for trial.

Burglary upon a Dwelling House.—Charles Apple, a German, was arrested yesterday morning, having entered, by means of false keys, the dwelling house of Samuel A. Suydam, No. 45 Morton-street. He was caught on the premises, and about $20 worth of property, which he is supposed to have stolen, found in his possession. Justice Davison locked him up for trial, in default of $3,000 bail.

Passing Counterfeit Money.—John Hartley, the boatman, whose arrest on Thursday night for attempting to pass, at the shoe-store of Thos. Lyons, No. 229 Greenwich-street, a counterfeit $1 bill on the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank of Jersey City, was mentioned in Friday's Times, was yesterday taken before Justice Osborne, and locked up for trial, in default of $1,000 bail. It was shown that he had nine of the bogus bills in his possession, and that he attempted to hide them in a coal-box.

Run over in Broadway.—John Conroyd, residing in Sixth-avenue, was run over yesterday afternoon at the corner of Broadway and Twelfth-street, by a cart, and severely injured. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

LONG ISLAND.

Mercantile Library Association.

A meeting of those interested in the formation of a Mercantile Library Association in Brooklyn was held at the Athenæum on Thursday evening, the 17th instant. A. B. Cavwell, Esq., was appointed Chairman, and Messrs. Charles S. Farley and Bowman Secretaries. The report of the Committee of 100 was presented by Mr. Hull, showing a list of subscriptions amounting to about $3,700, and near 600 members, which was received with loud and prolonged applause. The report of the Committee on Constitution was presented by Lewis Roberts, Esq., and the Constitution prepared by them, was adopted with one or two slight amendments and much applause.

Mr. Wallace read the report of the Committee proposed to inquire as to a location for the Society, recommending the Brooklyn Athenæum as the most desirable under the present circumstances. The subject was referred to the Board of Directors, with power and instructions to call a further meeting of the Society to ratify their acts.

Mr. W. A. Gellatly presented the report of the Committee on Lectures, adverse to making arrangements for a course of lectures, but recommending occasional lectures and readings by distinguished gentlemen.

The Constitution adopted provides that the first election be held on Wednesday, 23d inst., and, on motion, the Chair appointed a committee of five to nominate officers. On motion of Mr. Gellatly, the Committee on Constitution were empowered to make all the necessary arrangements for the first election.

After some further business, an address from Rev. Dr. Farley, and some remarks by Rev. Dr. Taylor, the meeting adjourned. This Society commences under the most favorable auspices, being encouraged by the best wishes and active support and coöperation of the most influential citizens of Brooklyn.

A Bold Attempt to Rob.—On Thursday evening last, three men entered the store of John Bauman, corner of Leonard and Marshall streets, Brooklyn, and while one called for tobacco, his two companions commenced passing bars of soap outside. Mr. Bauman noticed the transaction and gave the alarm, when the thieves started off. He followed them a short distance, when one of the party threw pepper in his eyes, and at the same time stabbed him in the shoulder, inflicting a severe but not dangerous wound. Subsequently officer Gardiner, of the Sixth Precinct, arrested John Smerry, of New-York, who was identified as one of the thieves, and was accordingly committed for examination.

Heavy Verdict.—Joseph Lehman sued the city of Brooklyn to recover damages for the death of a child drowned in a public cistern, corner of Division-avenue and Marshall-street, in May last. The well was improperly secured, there being nothing but a plank covering to it. The case was concluded in the Brooklyn City Court, before Judge Culver, yesterday, when the Jury rendered a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $1,500.

Contempt of Court.—Mr. Duugent, a Deutsche avocat of Brooklyn, was sentenced to seven days' imprisonment, by Justice Bopp, at Newtown, on Thursday last, for contempt of Court. Mr. Dugent was finally let off by paying a fine of $5.

Central Bank, Brooklyn.—Judge Davies vacated the order appointing a Receiver for this Bank, Thursday morning last. As before announced, the Bank is transacting business as usual.

Fatal Accident.—Bridget O'Connor, residing at No. 49 Main-street, Brooklyn, fell down a flight of stairs Thursday night, injuring herself so severely that she died the same night.

Died from Exposure.—The body of a foundling was picked up near Fourth-place, Brooklyn, yesterday morning. The Coroner's jury rendered a verdict of death from exposure.

Fatal Accident.—An Irishman, while intoxicated, fell from a car on the Long Island Railroad, a Jamaica, yesterday afternoon, and was almost instantly killed. His name could not be ascertained.

NEW-JERSEY.

Action against the New-Jersey Railroad for Horses Killed on the Railroad Track.—A suit has just been tried in the New-York Common Pleas, between —— Harrior and New-Jersey Railroad Company. The complaint alleged that plaintiff's horses on pasture at Wm. Price's, near Elizabeth, N. J., escaped from the pasture without the knowledge of Price or Harrior, and strayed on to defendant's track, and were run over and killed, through the negligence of defendants, by one of their engines, with a train of cars. The defendants moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that, if true, it showed no cause of action, as the plaintiff's horses were, at all events unlawfully on the premises. His Honor Judge Ingraham intimated that such was his opinion of the law, but, (as the counsel for the plaintiff urged strongly that the witnesses on both sides, and from out the State, were present, and that the facts had better be tried,) he would overrule the motion and note an exception thereto by defendant's counsel, that the law might be decided on the appeal. The case was then tried before a Jury by direction of the Judge, who said that, for the purposes of this trial, he would assume the law to be that the complaint, if true, would entitle the plaintiff to recover, leaving the defendants to their remedy on the law by appeal. The Jury, after being out several hours, standing six to six, and unable to agree, were discharged. It is not yet known whether the plaintiff will renew the suit. For the plaintiff, E. Zabriskie and J. W. Gerard. For defendants, Edgar S. Van Winkle.

Masonic.—Election of Officers.—Enterprise Chapter No. 2, of Jersey City, have elected the following officers for the ensuing year: H. P.—Leopold Lithaur; K.—A. A. Rice; Scribe—Martin Williams; C. of H.—S. M. Chambers; P. S.—J. S. Ridley; Treasurer—Alexander Griver; Secretary—A. Gilkinson.

Enterprise Lodge has also elected its officers for the ensuing year as follows: W. M.—Alex. Driver; S. W.—J. G. Ridley; J. W.—C. W. Chase; S. D.—L. Tellmann; J. D.—E. S. Johnson; Secretary—Francis Ballburgh; Treasurer—C. Grate.

Hiram Lodge will hold an election for officers on Monday evening next.

Friday, Dec. 18—P. M.

The Stock Exchange, as on Thursday, is almost the only point of interest in Money affairs, to-day. The unusual interregnum in the sailing of the European steamers, and the delay in the receipt of later news from the other side, made a dull market for Exchange. The export demand for Specie has also fallen off; except for doubloons for Havana, which are again wanted. The terms for bills on London drawn against produce continue irregular, 107@109 ⅌ cent.; bankers' bills 109@109½ ⅌ cent. Philadelphia and Baltimore funds are improving, the former 97½@97⅞; Baltimore 95½@96 ⅌ cent. Money continues easy both on call and for discounts; though from no decided increase of accommodation at bank, but rather from the absence of actual employment in general trade.

A brief summary of the Canada's news was telegraphed from Halifax to-day and published in the evening papers. After the printed list of sales at the Stock Exchange in the afternoon, an unfavorable interpretation was put upon the money accounts, particularly the report from Hamburg, by some of the speculators, and lower prices were
